City, schools at odds over airport funds

By RAY DAY
ANP Managing Editor

Romulus city and school district officials bumped heads Monday night, when discussing whether or not a joint lobbying effort calling for the taxation of concessions at the Metropolitan Airport should be continued between the two governmental bodies.

Romulus Community Schools Superintendent William Bedell and school board President Pat Patterson appeared before council members at the regular council meeting, asking for a decision on whether the informal agreement should be further pursued. In the pact, city and school officials agreed to split 50-50 the $2,000 per-month bill resulting from the hiring of a lobbyist at the state level.

The lobbying firm was to encourage state lawmakers to repeal a 1930 statute that exempts concessionaires on airport property from paying property taxes, according to city and school officials. By requiring airport businesses to pay property taxes, between $20 and $30 million could be added to the Romulus list of property values, officials said.

"After (state Rep.) Jim Kosteva was elected, he reinstated the concessionaires' bill. With the school district—who is the major beneficiary of any tax—we felt we would best benefit from having a lobbyist to keep us informed," explained Romulus Mayor Beverly McAnally.

Currently, the airport is located in the city of Romulus, but the land is county owned. See LOBBYIST, page A-4

10 seek funding in block grants

By RAY DAY
ANP Managing Editor

Ten city organizations and business groups requested a portion of the $87,000 the city will receive in federal Community Development Block Grant monies this year during a public hearing Monday.

The monies are sent to the city by the federal government in August or September, according to Dennis Oakes, community development director. The distribution of federal monies to localities was authorized in 1974 to replace several categorical grant programs.

CDBG funds are to be used to benefit low- and moderate-income people, prevent or eliminate slums and blight or meet an urgent community development need.

The 10 requests for the funding totaled more than $230,000, making the need for a slashing of some requests and narrowing of others inevitable, Oakes said.

Last year, city council members approved the allocation of $92,096 in CDBG funds to nine organizations. This year, less money is being sent by the federal government to the city due to the budget reforms, Oakes said.

Requesting CDBG funding (and the amount of the request and purpose) were: the Romulus Historical Commission, $25,000 for historic schoolhouse restoration; Information Center Homeshare program $725, housing referral service; Romulus Building Department, $15,000, building demolitions; Romulus Arts Council, $4,000, student art exhibit; Romulus Recreation Department, $12,500; Fernandez park parking, fitness course and park signs; Romulus Downtown Development Authority, $80,000, Goddard Road improvements; Romulus Community Development Department, $55,000, historic site improvements; Romulus Help Center, $23,000 minor home repair program and Youth Assistance Program; Family and Neighborhood Services, $15,000, creative development; and Councilman Jimmie Raspberry, $1,000, renovations of Cypress Park area.

Oakes told council members he would study the requests and report back to them with a recommendation at the March 28 council meeting.

Crime decreases slightly in early 1988

By THOMAS M. VARCIE
ANP Staff Writer

Crime was down by 6 percent in Romulus for the first two months of 1988 compared to one year ago including significant decreases in larcenies and burglaries, while increases included arrests and auto thefts.

Romulus Police Chief Charles E. Wilmoth said auto theft increased 41 percent from 1987 figures, but the number of arrests in the city also increased 38 percent, which Wilmoth said could be a result of the public joining forces with police officers.

"Citizen involvement is a key thing for us. The people are starting to interact with the police and are really starting to care," Wilmoth said. "Increased public awareness makes a decrease in the crime."

Wilmoth also said there has been a 15 percent increase in miles driven by officers on patrol in Romulus, which he said can deter crime from the city.

The two-month figures for burglaries went from 98 incidents in 1987 to 88 in 1988, larcenies decreased from 211 to 195, while the auto thefts increased from 66 to 93. Wilmoth said the auto thefts are a problem in the community, but he mentioned he would like to have some help to deter the thieves.

"I would like to address our problems with auto theft. I hope the problems can be addressed by the Western Wayne County Auto Theft Task Force."

Other crime statistics show that rapes in the city were down with five incidents in 1987 and two in 1988, robberies were down from 16 to 10, assaults were down from 21 to 16 and arsons decreased from five to two.

But, increased public awareness and increased patrols of officers, according to Wilmoth, seem to have an effect on the crime.

"There has been more concern with the public. We also started the Neighborhood

Watch program in 1987 and people decided they had enough so they wanted to do something about it," Wilmoth said. "We had two breaking and enterings this month that were stopped because of the direct interaction of the public. They called the police."

Baumann: Former councilman moves on to a new life

By THOMAS M. VARCIE
ANP Staff Writer

It sometimes hurts to say goodbye, but the departure of Barry Baumann from his hometown of Romulus is especially sad for the former councilman.

Baumann, who served on the Romulus City Council from 1981 until his defeat in the election last November, will be moving to Lansing March 12. While he has worked in Lansing as a State Senate technician for four and a half years, the 37-year-old lifelong Romulus resident found the decision to move closer to his job somewhat painful. He admitted that his loss in the election by only 19 votes helped him make the difficult decision to leave his city.

"It hurt very deeply to lose because I put my heart, soul and guts into being a councilman," he said.

"I had to analyze working in Lansing and living in Romulus. It is a tremendous financial burden," Baumann said. "I looked at the overall picture of what is best for Barry Baumann. I decided to look out for myself. I looked at the political climate in Romulus and I don't like it. I looked at if I wanted to be part of that again or do what is best for me," he said.

Baumann, single, with a Liberal Arts degree from St. Mary's College, said moving to a new home for the first time would be more than difficult for him, but the hour and a half drive to work was also wearing.

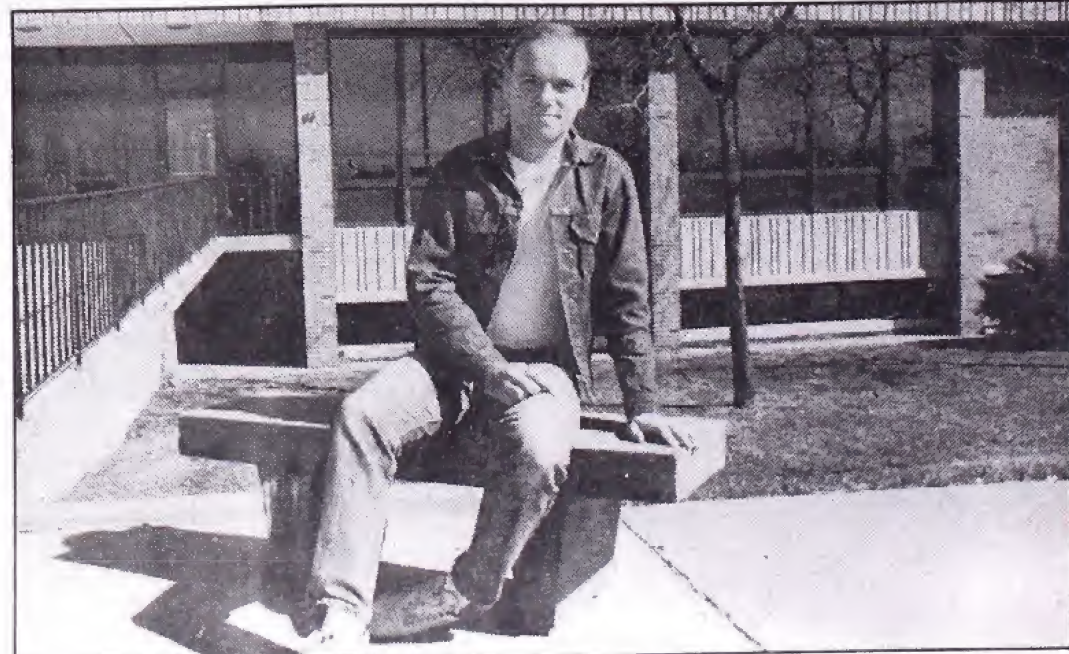

"I have no other home than Romulus. It will be hard to leave a place that I've worked so hard at what I've tried to accomplish. But, I'll be saving a bundle (of money). The positives definitely outweigh the negatives. I think it's the best for me right now."

Baumann said part of his political philosophy was influenced by Robert Kennedy, whom he had an opportunity to see in Detroit. He said he was influenced by Kennedy's saying, "I see things as they are and say, 'why.' I see things as they could be and say, 'why not.' Baumann said he tried to apply that philosophy when he served in political office.

"I saw Romulus was very stagnant and I reflected on what the city was at that time when we were a township," he said. "Going on Bobby Kennedy's philosophy, I said I could make a difference. I feel my six years as a councilman can show that difference. In some respects I succeeded and other respects I didn't."

But now, Baumann will be concentrating on his career which includes providing services for the senate staff, their supplies and

Police officials study Mutual Aid

Policy officials from all 17 western Wayne County communities have been asked to attend a March 23 meeting to help establish a formal Mutual Aid plan for the area.

The meeting, set for 10 a.m., is the result of a recognized need for a formalized, regional emergency plan after the crash of Flight 255 in Romulus and visit from Pope John Paul II last year.

Several communities in Wayne County already have a Mutual Aid agreement, including the Downriver area, Detroit-Highland Park region and Grosse Pointe area. Mutual Aid is an agreement between public safety officials to assist other departments with manpower and equipment in times of crisis and emergency.

Romulus Police Chief Charles Wilmoth said a Mutual Aid pact exists for all firefighters in Wayne County and police officers in every area except western Wayne County. The local agreement would tie in to agreements with other regions of the county and county public safety unit, the chief said.

Armed robber strikes hotel

A lone robber walked away with the small amount of cash he took from the Sheraton hotel, located on Merriman Road, at 12:30 a.m. March 2, according to police.

The man entered the lobby of the hotel and headed toward the counter, where a clerk was stationed. The man said he had a gun and demanded cash from the counter, according to reports.

He then fled on foot.

No injuries were reported in the incident, and no weapon was seen.

City employee hearing reset

A preliminary examination for former Romulus Department of Public Works employee Houston Glastner has been rescheduled for 9 a.m. Wednesday, March 16 in the 34th District Court, Romulus.

Glastner had been arrested, arraigned and charged with embezzlement, a felony. He is a suspect in the taking of city money or property, according to State Police officials called in to investigate the matter in November.

The hearing, originally scheduled for March 2, was reset after the Wayne County prosecutor investigating the case reduced charges to larceny in a building, also a felony.

Glastner has been released on personal bond, following his arraignment Feb. 18.

Councilman is absent again

Romulus City Councilman Alan Lambert was recorded as absent (unexcused) from the city council meeting Monday night, the fourth consecutive meeting he has missed.

The veteran councilman — who is currently training in the Detroit Police Academy before he can become a police officer in Romulus — was not available for comment on his absence.

Official photos are contracted

Members of the Romulus City Council approved the awarding of a $505 bid to Lasting Images, of Southgate, for the city officials' portrait to hang in the council chambers.

Council members had tabled the matter at their last meeting, waiting to gather additional input into a "long-lasting photo printing method."

Also submitting bids for the portrait were Nelson Photography, of Romulus ($639 bid) and Vince Palazzolo, of Wyandotte ($400 bid).

Free dumping is OK'd for summer

Fees for the dumping of trash in the city dumpster — located in front of the Department of Public Works building, on Goddard Road — will be waived for residents during the months of May, June, July, August and September.

City council members approved the free dumping at their meeting Monday in conjunction with the Romulus Beautification Committee spring cleanup campaign.

Residents named to planning group

The reappointment of Romulus residents Duwayne Martin and Jack Burton to the city planning commission was approved by council members at their meeting Monday.

Terms for the two offices will expire Jan. 31, 1991.

Recreation honor nominees needed

Names of candidates for the Romulus Recreation Advisory Board Distinguished Service Award are needed before the 4:30 p.m. April 3 deadline.

The award will be presented to an outstanding recreational supporter for the city. To qualify, the candidate must have spent at least five years in a volunteer capacity in one or more recognized recreational activities in Romulus. Forms are available at the recreation center.

Dear and precious

Fifth- and sixth-grade students at Cory Elementary School, Romulus, were asked to bring items "dear and precious" to them to school for the day. The end was interesting and varied, to say the least. Dan Fortune, 11, brought collection of baseball cards for the event, a collection he started more than four years ago. Shatina Wilkins, 11, brought in her pink Care Bear stuffed animal, one of her Christmas gifts. The day was designed by teachers to demonstrate the need to share with others, officials said. Shopping development is near, official says

By HAY DAY
ANP Managing Editor

The securing of a "major development" in Romulus is almost complete, although details of the project are premature, according to Dennis Oakes, economic development director.

Oakes said Monday he is optimistic that a major shopping development will be constructed in the city on Wayne Road, in the Goddard Road area. An "official" statement should be made about the deal within two months, he said.

"I'm fairly optimistic that it will go," he said. "But things can always change."

Oakes said, in a report to members of the city council, that he has been meeting with Michael Lippett, a commercial broker with Coldwell Banker, to discuss a potential shopping center in Romulus. Lippett is spearheading a project for a shopping center developer in Wayne, Oakes explained.

"Mr. Cato was contacted to determine his interest in undertaking a similar project here. Through Mr. Lippett, it was indicated that we should develop a proposal, including information on specific sites, traffic counts, population growth and any recent market data we have available," Oakes said in his report. "Related to this, we have also recently been in contact with two potential shopping center developers that have discussed their interest in retail developments."

Although he would not disclose details of the plan, Oakes confirmed that city officials have been meeting with Plymouth-based land syndicator Rex Ruark. Ruark last week met with Andy Solak, second vice president of the Manufacturer's Bank, Romulus, and chairman of the Downtown Development Authority, to discuss the purchase of land in the

Wayne and Goddard roads area for another "major development."

Ruark said last week that he would like to establish a limited partnership of about 22 local investors who could provide him with the capital needed to buy the privately owned land in the area. The property could, in turn, be sold to a developer, Ruark said, who could transform the property into a shopping plaza, featuring a grocery store or discounting firm as an anchor.

In addition to the shopping development, Oakes said an ad hoc advisory committee of the city council is meeting to discuss a proposed senior citizen housing development and potential site. One potential nonprofit sponsor for the plan has been found, Oakes said.

Nevertheless, the key to attracting new businesses and residential housing to the city is in reshaping the image and promotional stance of the community, Oakes explained.

"The difficulty we always have is not that developers are not aware of Romulus, they just don't believe we have the market they need," Oakes said. "We're trying to change that."

Spelling bee champ is reciting 'jabberwocky'

By THOMAS M. VARCIE
ANP Staff Writer

Rachael Cook knows how to spell "jabberwocky" and that knowledge helped her win the Area-Y Spelling-B hosted recently at Luckett Christian Academy, Taylor.

Cook, 12, a seventh-grade student at Romulus Junior High School, competed against 21 other school spelling bee champions and took the honors. Her next competition will be in the state finals at the end of March at Lawrence Institute of Technology. If she wins, she will go to Washington, D.C. where she will compete in the national championship.

Michael Blackburn, Cook's English teacher, said each English class in the school had a spelling bee. From there, each winner participated in a spelling-off, which was won by Cook. He said she then went to the area competition.

"She's a very good student. She's very popular and has won numerous academic awards," Blackburn said.

Joette Cook, Rachael's mother, said her daughter "likes to read all of the time and she's always on the honor roll. She's always been good in school and she's always been a good speller."

Teens: Proposed center would focus on health

By THOMAS M. VARCIE
ANP Staff Writer

Romulus junior and senior high school students and their parents will be questioned this month in an attempt to determine the fate of a proposed teen health center in the city.

Kathleen Conway, project director for the Romulus Adolescent Health Advisory Committee, said surveys will be distributed to the parents by mail and students will take part in "comprehensive surveys of their health habits" during school hours the last two weeks of March.

"Through the evaluations, we will determine if there is enough support in the city to have a center. We will be able to see what the people want in the community through these surveys," said Conway, who was hired as the project director last October. "The exact purpose of the center would be determined through the public's ideas."

She said the center would provide the physical, social and psychological needs of Romulus teens. She said the range for individuals visiting the clinic would probably be age 12-20, but she added that parental consent for the visitation may be required, depending on responses of the surveys.

"There isn't a lot of teen health care available in Romulus. This would set up a teen health center near the senior and junior high schools," Conway said. "There is a need for some teens to have help. Romulus has some areas that we expect may show up that have particular problems."

Mike Teasdale, principal of Romulus High School, said the idea for the teen health center is a very positive thing and the community must supply input to the city and committee to determine exact functions of the center.

"We need to find out what the community wants. It has to be developed to meet the needs of the community," Teasdale said. "At this point, teen health centers need to be supported. We can show that some teenagers have health needs that have been unmet."

He said the community surveys distributed will determine how much support will be available from the community for the center. He added there are other cities with teen health centers which were supported.

"I'm anxious to get the results of the surveys. I don't know what the community feelings are," Teasdale said. "There is a very diverse group in terms of teen health centers with the community. Other cities extend their services off campus (the high school grounds). That can affect the services of the center. I encourage the community to give us good input so we can reflect on what the people want."

One restriction that would apply for the health center if it would be on school property is that birth control would not be allowed to be distributed or prescribed to students. Under law, Michigan schools are not allowed to dispense or prescribe birth control to students in a center in the school or on the school grounds. This would limit the center to strictly counseling, unless, as Conway said, the residents of Romulus agree to have the clinic off the school grounds.

"For now, the school can give out information, but we can't give out birth control or condoms. That's the big controversy. On the school grounds, we're bound by those laws," Conway said. "All we can do now is counseling. If a high school girl is pregnant, all we can do is counseling. We can't prescribe her anywhere. We can just give her advice. But, from the surveys we receive, the public can give their views on such matters."

Concern for the need of a health center came from Dr. William M. Bedell, superintendent of Romulus Schools and Romulus teachers, according to Conway.

"They were seeing a lot of substance abuse. Generally, there was the feeling that there wasn't a lot of help for the kids in the city," she said. "The health clinic would staff physicians and medically trained workers. Right now, there is one school nurse to take care of the students and not even licensed to give shots."

For now, money has not been a problem in the planning stages. The Michigan Department of Public Health awarded a planning grant for the proposed teen health clinic of $20,000. The grant will fund a year-long study aimed at defining certain areas of the health clinic, goals and ways of servicing the community. In June, Conway said, the committee will go to the Department of Public Health and determine whether to start the program or continue the planning.

Before the health department supplies additional funds, however, Conway said the Romulus Adolescent Health Advisory Committee would have to make their recommendations, then the school board would have to vote on the decision.

"It's hard to say how it looks now. There are a lot of kids and parents saying there is the need for a center."

Casino gambling: Area officials fear for the worst in plan

By TOM MOORADIAN
ANP Staff Writer

If you're a betting person, wager that local lawmakers and police officials won't support casino gambling in Detroit. They all believe that a bet placed in Detroit can only have negative results in the suburbs.

An ad-hoc committee, put together by Detroit Mayor Coleman Young, is presently preparing a feasibility study that would help determine whether casino gambling becomes a reality in Detroit.

Mayor Young, who two years ago opposed the idea, now believes that gambling may help solve some of the city financial and unemployment problems. According to reports, Young said the spinoff from gambling in tourism would help create jobs for the inner city.

If Young does manage to convince his city council that the benefits of gambling outweigh the evils, he would still have to obtain approval from the state legislature before the wheels of fortune could begin to spin on Belle Isle, one of areas frequently discussed as a possible site for the casinos.

Although the state constitution prohibited legalized gambling prior to 1963, laws have since been enacted that will permit it.

Local lawmakers said that they are against the idea of casino gambling not only in Detroit but anywhere else in the state.

In fact, according to state Rep. Lynn Owen (D-Maybee), a resolution is presently being circulated in the state House of Representatives "opposing casino gambling in Detroit or anywhere else."

"That resolution is being circulated by Griffin (Michael J. Griffin) that would put the House on record as opposing it," Owen noted. "My signature is already on that resolution."

And those who were selling casino gambling as a panacea, should look to Atlantic City. According to the reports we're receiving, that city is worst off now than before it decided to permit gambling.

— Bill Keith
state representative

Owen said he viewed gambling, including the state-run lottery, as a "poor man's tax."

"Gambling is not a solution to anyone's problems. Not the state's or an individual's. And legalizing it doesn't make it right. Gambling personifies all the evils one can conjure — it brings with it organized crime, prostitution, and drugs. And how can I support that?"

Owen's colleague, William R. Keith (D-Garden City) concurred.

"I am concerned that if casino gambling would entice the wrong elements into the area, and, because of our proximity to Detroit, the problems would spread to other areas. Garden City and Inkster are not that far away from Detroit. It would do inestimable damage to all our communities."

"And those who were selling casino gambling as a panacea, should look to Atlantic City. According to the reports we're receiving, that city is worse off now than before it decided to permit gambling."

"I believe that casino gambling would only bring heartache and devastation. I am categorically against it," Keith said.

State Rep. Justine Barnes (D-Westland) echoed Keith's sentiments. She was concerned about the effects casino gambling would have not only on the remaining industries, commerce and firms in Detroit but on family life as well.

"What we are hearing is that casino gambling would create jobs," Barnes said, "but what kind of jobs? Minimum wage? Card dealers? But what about the jobs and families that would flee the city because of the influx of the parasites that latch on to gambling?"

"An addicted gambler would do anything to gamble — it's no secret," Barnes continued. "I know of cases where people on Social Security would take their checks and head for the gambling tables and not come back until they have lost it all. Do we really want that?"

State Rep. James Kosteva (D-Canton Township) said that "at this point in time, I am against it."

"Whoever the advocates for casino gambling are, they will have a lot of convincing to do. At this point, I definitely am against it."

Kosteva also pointed out that "based upon the Atlantic City experience, gambling did not benefit the neighborhoods. It also had a negative impact upon the existing businesses because customers exclusively patronized casino and hotel facilities."

High-speed rail line would put western Wayne County on the map

By BETH SUNDRLA
ANP Staff Writer

The establishment of a tri-state commission will help make a high-speed rail linking Detroit and Chicago become a reality, state officials said.

The tri-state agreement, which was approved by the state House and is headed to the Senate, would include Michigan, Indiana and Illinois.

The pact would create a 15-member commission, giving Michigan 10 seats, Illinois four seats and Indiana one seat.

State Rep. Raymond M. Murphy (D-Detroit) is the sponsor of the bill. State Rep. James Kosteva (D-Canton Township) is the co-sponsor.

The compact would review proposals for development and construction of a high-speed rail link.

"The need for a high-speed rail link has been apparent for some time," Murphy said.

"A high-speed train that can travel at 125 mph offers a tremendous opportunity to be able to move passengers and light freight between Detroit and Chicago in three hours. The additional beneficial spinoffs that a high-speed train presents in jobs and economic development are just beginning to surface," Murphy said.

The legislation "will move Michigan one step closer to completing a tri-state pact on a high-speed rail that should provide a significant job-producing transportation network for the Midwest," Kosteva said.

The line could be established along an existing Amtrak line, a line currently going from Detroit — through Wayne and Inkster — to Chicago or a line which would pass through Romulus and Taylor, Kosteva said.

Kosteva said the rail is of interest to him because of the benefits to western Wayne County.

The rail could be an alternative to plane travel for some Michigan residents.

"It is also possible the train could be used for freight purposes," Kosteva said.

"It could be a boom to local businesses in and around that rail line," he said.

Kosteva said he favors a stop at the Detroit Metropolitan Airport, in Romulus, to connect commuters in the area to the airport.

The compact must be funded principally by private funds, Kosteva said. The cost for a 125 mph train is currently about $2 billion.

"In many cases, the project would use tracks that are already there," Kosteva said. But some of the tracks would need to be updated or altered.

An expensive part of the project would be elevating or eliminating grade crossings of the rail line. Grade crossings are those areas where train tracks cross the road.

Kosteva said some 300 grade crossings now exist.

Once the legislation for the compact is approved, each of the 15 commission members would be entitled to one vote. But an action by the commission would not be binding unless there was approval by a majority of members, including members from two states.

"Given Michigan's 10 members, we will still have a great deal of control over the commission. But by having members from at least two states approve an action, we have made the commission more accommodating to Indiana and Illinois," Murphy said.

State Rep. Phil Hoffman (R-Horton), a member of both the ad-hoc committee and the subcommittee on the high speed rail project, believes that completing the high-speed rail "will further enhance our state's position in our attempts to land the super conducting super collider."

The state Senate is expected to complete action by spring.

Berlinn brags about daughter

Romulus School Board Trustee Ken Berlinn took the opportunity last week to announce to fellow school board members the selection of his daughter, Laurie, to the All-State second team for girls' basketball.

Berlinn explained that he was exceptionally proud of the honor as it was based on the votes of area coaches.

He received congratulations from the board members and district administrators.

Video store owners predict ratings won't curb rentals

By BARBARA ALBERT
ANP Staff Writer

A new bill submitted to the state legislature will only reinforce what video rental stores are already doing.

Senate Bill 490 would require that the Motion Picture Rating Code be prominently displayed on the outside of a videotape. A companion bill would require rental agencies to put sexually explicit or violent films out of the reach of minors.

Robert Geake (R-Northville) introduced the bills. Both bills were given the stamp of approval from Senate committees. They will be introduced on the Senate floor sometime this week.

Larry Waara, manager of Discount Video Livonia West, said ratings already appear on most videotapes.

"People have to look for them, but they are there," he said.

He said the ratings often appear in different places on all of the boxes. The older films do not carry the rating on the outside of the box.

Most video rental stores already separate sexually explicit and violent tapes. Some cities have even enacted ordinances which make this a requirement.

Adult-type films falling into the hands of minors is a problem most video rental agents agree. Most, however, have come up with their own methods for solving the problem.

One video store owner who refused to disclose her name said a lot of young people come in and try to rent adult films. She said she makes a point of calling their parents to make sure they have permission to see such a movie. She added that it is surprising the number of parents who give the permission.

Waara said they police the situation by questioning people who open a club membership with them. Waara said people who sign up fill out a card which indicates whether or not they have children and what types of films those children are allowed to rent.

Westland resident to head firm Blake is acting director

By BETH SUNDRLA
ANP Staff Writer

Peter Blake, of Westland, has been named acting executive director and general manager of the Society of Manufacturing Engineers, Dearborn.

"It's exciting. Manufacturing is becoming increasingly important in the United States and the world," Blake said.

With the new techniques and technologies in manufacturing, the Society has increasing importance, Blake said.

Blake has been an executive with the SME headquarters staff since 1967. He served as director of special projects until he was appointed to his new position.

Kenneth L. Thorpe resigned as executive director and general manager of the SME headquarters staff and left the organization Feb. 22, according to Society President John E. Mayer Jr.

"Effective immediately, Peter Blake is acting executive director and general manager until a replacement is selected or until other arrangements are made," Mayer said in a prepared statement.

Thorpe has been executive director and general manager of the SME since Oct. 1, 1986, when he succeeded the retired Bill Hilty. Thorpe comes to SME from Borg-Warner's Automotive Transmission Systems Division in Muncie, Ind., where he had been a vice president.

Blake had been serving as director of special projects before his appointment. His previous assignments have been as director of associations and membership services, manager of certification and manager of technical activities. Blake holds a bachelor's degree from the Detroit Institute of Technology and is a U.S. Navy veteran.

With 80,000 members in 67 countries, the SME attempts to keep abreast of the latest in technology. The Society offers continuing education materials for members.

By publishing books, magazines, technical papers and technical video tapes, the Society has an entire line of products to help members gain up-to-date information, Blake said.

Blake is a member of the American Society of Association Executives and is a certified association executive. He is also a member of the Michigan Society of Association Executives and the Council of Engineering and Scientific Society Executives.

Founded in 1932, SME sponsors more than 300 senior chapters and 190 student chapters worldwide.

Blake's new duties will include working with and directing the SME staff and also developing projects and activities for members.

Non-members are also eligible for some of the SME services, Blake said.

"Manufacturing technology is keeping America strong, and a great deal of new information is needed," he said.

The SME office is located on SME drive, in Dearborn, near Evergreen and Ford roads.

Pete Blake, of Westland, was recently named the acting executive director of the Society of Manufacturing Engineers, Dearborn. The firm produces a variety of educational and support materials for industrial and engineering firms in the area. ANP photo by Ann Grimes/staff photographer

Westland retailer wants to 'secure' many homes

By BARBARA ALBERT
ANP Staff Writer

Most people think of security systems in museums, banks and Hollywood mansions. But they rarely think of a security system for their home.

Jim Bellenir hopes to change all of that.

The J.L. Bellenir Co. opened in October. The business is operated out of Bellenir's home, in Westland.

An electrician for most of his life, Bellenir sells and installs security systems made by the Linear Corp.

"My neighbors were being robbed, and you hear about all the crime in Detroit," Bellenir said. "I just thought it was time for people to protect themselves."

Bellenir works with three separate systems. One is designed for residential use, and the others are for commercial and industrial use.

Telephone numbers for the police and fire department, as well as a hospital or doctor, can be programmed into the alarm.

The systems can even take the place of a smoke detector. An intruder in the home would be frightened away by the loud siren which goes off when a door or window is opened. Strobes and other types of signals are available as well.

Special panic buttons are sold with the alarm system. One can be carried around on neighborhood walks. If a stranger approaches, the button can be pushed, and the alarms in the house will go off. This button works well at about one-half block from the house, according to Bellenir.

Bellenir also sells a panic button for the elderly and invalids. The device is worn on a string around the person's neck. If they fall or have some sort of attack, they need only press the button, and help will be on the way.

Bellenir said not many homeowners are aware that there is an alarm system that is affordable to them. He said the Linear alarm is well-adapted to home use because it is easily concealable and there are no wires.

"They are not as expensive as people think, and they provide a lot of protection," he said.

Average cost of the home security system is $250.00

Conference trims list of business concerns

A Governor's Conference on Small Business in Lansing Feb. 25 and 26 resulted in a list of the top concerns of small business in the state.

About 250 small business owners or managers and observers attended the conference including David J. Willett, president of the Small Business Association of Michigan and publisher of Associated Newspapers Inc. in Wayne.

"We were able to come out with an agenda that most of us are happy with," Willett said.

"We've identified some issue areas that we need to work together and make improvements in," he said.

The conference was based on the results of six regional conferences last year across the state. From those regional conferences 200 different proposals for legislation to help small business in Michigan were listed for consideration.

These issues were narrowed down to two top 10 lists, according to Lee Schwartz, communications director for the Small Business Association of Michigan.

Among the issues Michigan small business people consider most important are: regulation of public and non-profit entities; access to capital; small business policy input; preparation for the workplace including training and retraining; improved air transportation; welfare reduction; small business, women, minority and handicapped-owned businesses set aside program; effective communications network; small business entrepreneurial development programs and technology and modernization and assistance to small business in interstate and international export trade.

Many valuable lessons are passed from generation to generation

There are some lessons in life that are learned very early.

I was reminded of that last week as I watched the Olympic competition from Calgary, Canada. In particular, I took note of the single skaters who, with nearly supernatural style and grace, performed to all sorts of music. As I watched several of them falter, I thought of the lyrics to an old song, "pick yourself up, dust yourself off, and start all over again." That's the philosophy that these world-class athletes all seem to share. Stumble, fall or falter...they just put a little more brightness in their smiles and keep right on going.

Some of these skaters seemed a little distracted despite their obvious ability to focus on their performance as the watchful eyes of thousands of tense spectators and millions of television viewers were on them. Who wouldn't be nervous? And that exposure was surely responsible, in part, for a few of the faux pas, glitches or fumbles.

But the ability of these athletes to recover and carry on is astonishing. After an error, virtually all of them seemed to regain their control and right themselves.

To this day, I remember exactly when I was first exposed to that kind of determination and the idea that perseverance was a way of life. I was 6 years old and my parents took me to visit my paternal grandmother who was dying.

Going to see Grandma Ella was a regular occurrence, but this visit was special and I will always remember it. Ella Knowles Willett had been ill for some time. She was a brave, strong and charming woman who frequently wept as she spoke of her sadness at knowing she would never see her grandchildren reach adulthood.

This was in the days prior to radiation and chemotherapy and Grandmother Willett was dying a slow and agonizing death due to breast cancer.

On this day, her condition had obviously deteriorated, but she gave me a smile from her tall dark chair in the living room of her Detroit home, and her voice was filled with love.

"I'm going to teach you something I want you to always remember because it will help you deal with life," she told me with a smile. "Now, listen carefully. If at first you don't succeed, try, try again," she said in her clear, but failing voice.

Then she had me repeat her words, again and again I recited what she'd said until I could rattle the whole phrase off without hesitation.

Grandma Ella died a few months later, but her simple phrase was like a seed planted in fertile soil. I've thought at length about what she said and how much the love I had for her influenced my thinking and belief in her words.

I've wondered, too, at the effect my children's parents have had on their thinking through the years. To be sure, I have done things and said things that I regret deeply. I grieve for any negative influence I may have had on my children's thinking.

Perhaps it is healthy for all of us to stop to ponder the influence others have had on our thinking, both positively and negatively. Why are we the way we are? If we are not happy with ourselves, not in touch with ourselves and those around us, such insights might set the stage for a positive correction in the course of our lives.

If a child has a receptive mind and attitude, we can do a great deal to help him or her avoid some of the greatest disappointments in life. We can, most of all, help them to understand how to right themselves when they trip and fall, pick themselves up when they falter and start all over again.

We can, by word and deed, show them, teach them, tutor them in this philosophy. They can learn to...try, try again.

Here's to the next generation, may they all have the courage and determination of our Olympic athletes and of Ella Willett.

See you next week.

New state law to curb drug trafficking

State law enforcement officials recently introduced a new program designed to fight organized illegal drug distribution in Michigan. The program creates a new law enforcement team which is designed to identify and apprehend criminals who import illegal drugs into our state.

The program is financed by a federal grant totaling nearly $750,000, matched with funds confiscated from drug raids. State officials believe that the law enforcement team will help put "drug pins" out of business in Michigan.

Drug enforcement units already in place around the state concentrate on "street

level" operations. The new program will focus attention on major dealers who operate profitable drug enterprises extending across the state and into other states and foreign countries.

The team consists of 12 investigators who work in several counties. This effort also involves local, state and federal law enforcement agencies, as well as local prosecutors. The drug enforcement units compile information and coordinate efforts leading to the prosecution of major drug importers.

The legislature is serious about battling drug trafficking in Michigan. For instance, a recently enacted law creates new mandatory jail sentences for sale or delivery of controlled substances.

State lawmakers are also being asked to consider measures patterned after federal legislation that would allow the seizure of assets of drug dealers. Other suggested legislative action would create a drug profiteering tax based on assets held by a drug dealer. These provisions would deprive drug dealers of the profits of their illegal enterprise. Additionally, the Legislature has been asked to consider mandatory life sentences without parole for major drug dealers.

Although drug trafficking remains a serious problem in our state, law enforcement agencies are making progress in the battle against the importation of drugs to Michigan. The legislature is charged with developing new policies and more effective deterrents. It will not be easy to drive illegal drug traffic out of Michigan, but the health, safety and future of our state demands the effort.

Gambling

Kosteva also had some concerns about what casino gambling would do to existing charities and organizations that relied heavily upon existing legalized gambling, such as bingo, as fundraisers.

State Sen. George Hart (D-Dearborn) said that gambling "only compounded the social problems of a city."

Casino gambling opens the doors to the exploitation of those who can least afford it, Hart stressed.

"The odds are always stacked up against the gambler, but there are always those who dream of getting rich," Hart said. "I can not and will not support casino gambling."

State Sen. William Faust (D-Westland) also believes gambling would not heal the problems ailing Detroit or "any other metropolitan city."

As a chairman of a committee that studied the feasibility of gambling in the 1960s, Faust pointed out that he had an opportunity to research the subject.

"It is understandable that Mayor Young is looking for solutions to the problems of his city," Faust said. "He feels that casino gambling may help stabilize the city, provide it with an additional economic base, create jobs and put idle youth to work. The legislature is willing to work toward that goal. Idle youth breeds all kinds of problems, as we all have learned. And we, in the legislature, must help these jobless find jobs."

"However, there are some unanswered social questions that are unique when you bring gambling to a city. Unlike Las Vegas and Monte Carlo (France) where the gamblers usually aren't residents and where the problem goes away when the gambler gets on the plane or bus, this will not be the case here."

"The social problem will remain where it originated - in the city," Faust said. "Again, I firmly believe that gambling would heal the problems of the city."

Police chiefs don't like the idea, either.

Leonard Rukkila, deputy police chief in Romulus, said that since Romulus housed the major airport in the area, the city would become "the center attraction."

"The news we get from Atlantic City is that gambling hasn't benefited that city at all - it caused more problems than it was supposedly going to cure," Rukkila said. "I believe we would get the brunt of the action, however, because of the airport. The influx of tourists usually brings along with it the undesirables."

Sumpter Township Police Chief Clinton Brown believes that the township is out of the line of the action because it is located west of the airport and Detroit.

"However, I am sympathetic with the other law enforcement agencies who would feel the impact. If organized crime moves in - and it usually does with casino gambling - no community would be immune. What affects Detroit would eventually affect all of us," Brown added.

Van Buren Township Police Chief Joseph Davies said the township, because of its geographic location from the airport and Metropolitan Detroit, also would not be affected by the gambling.

"I believe that we are too far west (from the airport and Detroit) so hopefully we wouldn't be involved with what is going on. But, really, I haven't given it too much thought because of our geographic location," Davies said.

Belleville Police Chief Willard Dockter said the combination of "too many losers that are created from gambling only can spell trouble."

"The negative aspects of gambling far outweigh the positive. There are no real winners from gambling. Eventually we all lose. I can't believe that it would create a job market that would outweigh the negative elements that are associated with it. The losers always outnumber the winners, so you can bet there will be trouble in one form or another. We just hope it doesn't reach out here."

Fred Stafford, director of public safety for the city of Wayne, said that he "hasn't given the issue much consideration."

"Honestly, I really haven't given this much thought," Stafford said. "Why worry about something that the odds are apparently so overwhelmingly against?"

What is the TREATMENT FOR GLAUCOMA

Glaucoma is the result of abnormally high fluid pressure within the eye, which can cause damage to the optic nerve and ultimately result in visual loss. The two main types of glaucoma are: chronic and acute (or narrow angle).

The chronic type is treated with daily use of eyedrops and/or pills to reduce eye pressure. When pressure cannot be controlled with medication, Argon laser treatment can be performed which opens tiny fluid channels within the eye, thereby lowering pressure.

Laser eye surgery eliminates the need to make an incision on the eye. The incidence of infection and other complications are greatly minimized. Laser treatment is performed in the doctor's office and there is minimal or no discomfort present. Vision after laser may be blurred, but clears within 24 hours. Patients can resume their normal activities immediately after laser.

In acute glaucoma, where pressure can suddenly rise to dangerously high levels, medication is given immediately to lower pressure. An Argon or YAG laser "iridotomy" is then performed which creates an opening in the colored iris of the eye to allow fluid passage. A laser iridotomy can also be performed in patients with narrow angles to prevent a future attack of acute glaucoma.

Only regular eye examinations can diagnose glaucoma. Early detection is essential in the preservation of valuable eyesight.

Juvenile criminals need deterrent

They are getting away with murder – literally. They are the 15- and 16-year-olds of the state who are protected by state juvenile authority guidelines when committing criminal acts of any nature. These “youngsters” know how to commit murder, rape, arson and armed robbery, yet they cannot be tried in the same manner as an adult committing those types of crimes until a juvenile court judge grants a waiver to do so.

Such a system is unfair and fails to provide these youths with strong enough reasons not to commit such heinous and unexcusable acts against society.

A series of crime reform bills awaiting Gov. Blanchard’s signature this week would change all of that for the 15- and 16-year-old criminals. In one proposal by state Sen. Rudy Nicholas (R-Waterford), 15- and 16-year-olds would be placed in the hands of a prosecutor when charged with a crime. The prosecutor would, in turn, determine what charges should be brought against the youth – ultimately deciding whether or not he or she should be tried as an adult.

We believe this system is fair and equitable, since it is the prosecutor who makes such determinations at the adult level, as well.

The juvenile crime problem is a huge one by even the most conservative estimates. One need point only to the Detroit school system where gun- and knife-wielding students create a new horror story for school officials almost daily.

The criminal justice system was developed in this state to protect juveniles from being labeled as criminals. It was thought that the petty crimes youngsters often commit should not mar their records for life.

But murder, rape, arson and armed robbery are, perhaps, the last types of crimes framers of our juvenile codes thought youths would be committing. Clearly, the nature of these offenses signals a need for reform.

In England, adults and juveniles are not differentiated in the criminal codes at any age. Thus, whether a 10-year-old or 50-year-old commits murder, he will be given a life sentence in the national prisons.

Perhaps such a system is too harsh – especially at age 10. But the equity implied here is a theory American citizens should adopt for their own. Crime is crime, whether the act is committed by a juvenile or by an adult. Too many Americans, we feel, are quick to protect the rights and comforts of criminals and fail to remember that it is the victim who receives no sort of equity after the crime has been committed.

Today, we urge Gov. Blanchard and state lawmakers to support the reforms to the juvenile system as proposed in our state. The current system doesn’t work, as the increasing number of juvenile crime offenders would suggest.

True, it is sad that we must consider imposing life prison sentences on 15-year-olds. But it is even more distressing that we, as a society, continue to let our children get away with murder.

He made a difference

There are those who, somehow, manage to make a difference in the world in which we live.

They are, lately, all too few and the loss of one of these people should be a time for some introspection and evaluation.

Residents in Romulus might take the opportunity this week to afford themselves that type of examination as they say goodbye to former City Councilman Barry Baumann. Baumann is leaving the city where he has resided since birth to move closer to his job in Lansing.

Baumann’s defeat in the election last year was by a mere 19 votes and many in the city will now tell anyone who’ll listen that the voters made a serious mistake.

While he may deny it, it seems obvious. Baumann is a man who came to maturity, political and philosophical, while serving on the Romulus City Council. His growth, as a human being and as a public servant, was obvious to even the most casual observer. His loyalties changed, his goals altered and he found the moral character to disagree with his colleagues when he felt their actions were not in the best interests of the residents.

Barry Baumann is a man who followed his conscience and it cost him the political office that allowed him to serve his city. And being able to make that difference by serving meant a great deal to Baumann. Now, he is moving on.

Barry Baumann made a difference in his city, and the impact of his decision to move on will be even more deeply felt than his absence from the council table.

We wish him well.

Resident claims taxes are unfair

To The Editor:

Many Wayne citizens are troubled by our property tax system. Why do property taxes seem to rise faster than property values? Why do our homes increase in value in good economic times at a much slower rate than surrounding communities? Why are our taxes fairly stable in bad economic times even though real estate values may have tumbled drastically? Why do some seem to pay very low taxes while others seem to pay very high taxes?

To answer these questions one must become aware of Wayne’s present property tax system and it’s built in inadequacies.

Wayne, unlike many other communities, allows the County of Wayne to assess our property. Wayne County, which always seems to be in financial difficulty, refuses to hire the staff necessary to assess our community properly. Most tax experts agree that a systematic study of property values should be made at least once every five to seven years. The last systematic study of our home assessments was done in 1953 (34 years ago)!

The County is also charged with adjusting taxes between communities so each community will pay its fair share of county taxes in relationship to others communities. The County because of their limited staffs do this by comparing State Equalized Value (S.E.V.). In other words they look at a computer sheet of sale prices and compare it to tax assessments and then arrive at what they call the S.E.V. multiplier. They average the differences between the aforementioned and come up with a percentage factor which they then multiply by every home in town!

This procedure would not be a problem if all homes were fairly assessed. Our problem in Wayne is that we have a large number of pre-WWII homes that are greatly under-assessed. For example we have older homes in our city that have sold for $55,000 that have a total tax bill of $1,300 while others which have sold for $38,000 pay $2,200 in taxes. Obviously some residents are under-taxed. Of course when large numbers are under-taxed the governmental units in question must raise the rate necessary to generate the funds necessary to provide our present level of services.

Even the above is no the heart of the problem. The county averages into its “S.E.V. multiplier” the totally under-assessed homes which raises their “S.E.V. multiplier.” This multiplier is then applied to every home in Wayne causing all homes in Wayne built after WWII to have their taxes increased disproportionately. Further as each year goes by the older homes pay disproportionately lower taxes which has the net effect of raising their selling prices and the newer homes pay disproportionately higher taxes which has the net effect of lowering their selling prices. The results repeats itself annually; the county takes the new figures which were calculated inappropriately, arrives at their new S.E.V. multiplier and then proceeds to compound their errors. Wayne homeowners, thus as a community, pay higher taxes which lead to lower home values which do not lead to lower taxes because of inappropriately developed S.E.V. multiplier – except in the case of the older homes which benefit from the present unfair system.

Wayne’s unfair tax system is hard to understand because most citizens feel that their base rate is the main determinant of value. It is the S.E.V. multiplier which is the main determinant of value and that is determined by false methods.

This problem is most complex but arriving at a fair solution will bring tax equity to our community; without tax equity our town cannot prosper as potential professional residents will look elsewhere for housing and further we will lose many of our current residents.

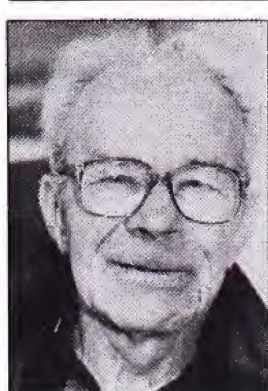

In conclusion I would like to indicate the following:

- People are willing to pay taxes but they feel that the taxes should be fair for all.
- The entire problem should be systematically studied so the best solutions possible can be selected for our citizens.
- The Ford Motor Stamping Plant will generate sufficient revenues that are at an ideal time in our cities history to address this problem; the revenues generated from the new factory can allow lower taxes for those paying too much and limit the increase for those paying too little.
- The City Council must face this issue squarely and soon. Their failure to address this issue will only continue the present unfair property tax system; a system which has those living in Glenwood Heights, Thimbark, Gloria Acres, Sun Win and Woodbrook as well as those in homes built since 1950 paying much higher taxes than they would otherwise.

IN SEARCH OF HIGHER

EDUCATION

College is critical, experts agree

By JANICE FRITZ
ANP Staff Writer

How important is higher education?

Can a person succeed in the "real world" without a lamb-skin piece of paper with a university seal stamped on it?

The answers to those questions differ, depending on who you ask and who you are, according to Jim Danielski, owner and founder of Career Planning Specialists, a career consultant firm in Plymouth.

Danielski works as a consultant to people who need help determining what type of career they would be best suited for by assessing an individual's best talents and backgrounds.

In Danielski's opinion, the need for education never ends.

"I think that in order for anyone to succeed out there, they must always be open to continuing education or a continuing personal development as I call it. I don't think that the need for education stops at the same time you finish your education. We're always learning something new," said Danielski.

"But there is no real magic in college for everybody. A college education is not going to automatically get someone in the door to a major corporation, although it will definitely help point you in the right direction," he continued.

Danielski said he has seen many people obtain high-paying positions without a college degree. However, these stories tend to be the exception rather than the rule.

Nevertheless, those who are not sure of which direction to turn need not fear.

"I have jumped around searching for the right job. I have wondered about what I should do with my life. That's why I decided that this is what I should be doing, because I knew I couldn't have been the only person feeling this way. Should I go to college or not? And if so, will it help me out? And if I do go, what should I major in?" said Danielski.

Those questions face most college-bound students each year. But the fear of having to develop an answer hasn't sidelined college students, as state studies show a steady increase in college enrollments.

Last fall, the percentage of students enrolled in colleges throughout the state of Michigan hit an all-time high, according to members of the State Board of Education.

Enrollment figures for the fall of 1987 showed that 534,995 students were seeking formal education training, which was a 2.4-percent increase compared to the 523,020 enrolled at colleges in 1986.

Twelve of the state 15 public universities reported increases in enrollment compared to 1986.

And just how prepared for the "real world" are students coming out of colleges?

Danielski thinks that no matter how well-honed a person is when he or she leaves the college campus, certain skills must be developed on the job.

"There are 35,000 different types of jobs out there, and so that means that there are at least that many skills that need to be polished up on. But I do have a few skills that I think every college graduate should work on before tackling a new job," said Danielski.

Those skills include the willingness to always continue learning, a strong ability to communicate with people and, above all, a commitment to excellence.

"Don't just do your job to get by. Do it by giving it your all - 100 percent," said Danielski.

But how does one obtain that job where he can give his all?

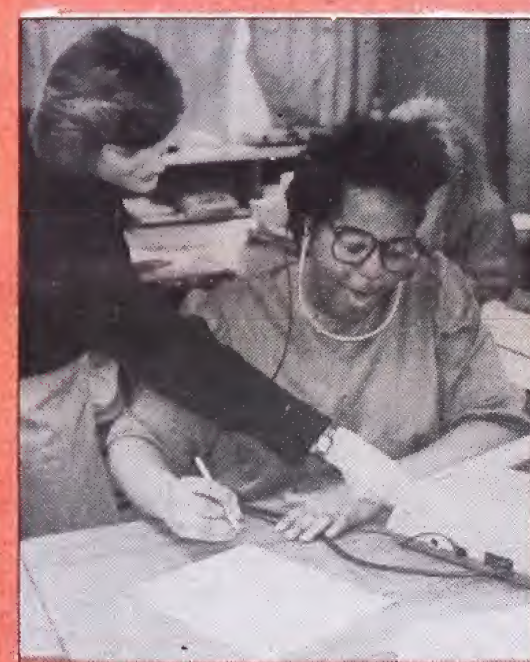

"What every person needs to do is assess what it is he or she wants to do and then cultivate those feelings. That should be first and foremost before going out to acquire any other skills. Otherwise, if a person just does the first thing that comes along, there could be repercussions later on in life," Danielski said.

Those repercussions include mid-life job crisis, which Danielski said he encounters frequently.

Finally, Danielski said, people must decide whether they want a job or a career.

"Ask yourself this: If you were to suddenly win the $12 million lotto jackpot, would you still want to continue doing what you are currently doing? If not, then you need to re-evaluate what you're doing."

Principals say students are ready for the world

Students graduating from high school today are at an advantage in the job market compared to graduates a decade ago, according to area high school principals.

"Jobs today require more technical training and are more complex than they were a decade ago. And I really think our students are better prepared for that than they were in years past," said Larry Wood, principal of John Glenn High School, Westland.

Wayne Memorial High School Principal Francis Winter agreed.

"Over the years, we have become more geared toward higher education. We place more of an emphasis on the demand for college degrees that most employers are now looking for in young people who are looking for work. But we also do not neglect the students who do not desire a college education. We pay attention to the non-college-bound students by, perhaps, encouraging them to take advantage of our voc-tech program or to at least learn some of the basic computer or clerical skills they may someday need out in the job market," said Winter.

Winter said that, in his own opinion, every student will need formal education of some form or another to succeed in the job world.

Roxanne Carmen changed career paths and headed back to school - despite the fact that she was 44 years old. Special photo to ANP

Despite her age, experience, nurse's life begins in college

Higher education opened the door to a whole new world for 44-year-old Roxanne Carmen, of Belleville.

Carmen is a general nurse in the Cardiac Step-Down Unit at Sinai Hospital, Detroit. Last month, she took the state board exams in order to become a registered nurse.

But if anyone had told Carmen 10 years ago that she would someday be a nurse, she would have never believed it, she said.

Not her, not someone with only a limited education.

When she was 15 years old, Carmen dropped out of high school, after completing the ninth grade, to marry her high school sweetheart.

When she was 21, she had her first baby, a daughter. When her second daughter was born, she concluded that her life would remain unchanged thereafter.

But Carmen soon discovered that her life could be anything she wanted it to be.

After 13 years of marriage, Carmen and her husband divorced, leaving her a single mother with two children to raise.

During this time, Carmen worked toward obtaining her General Education Diploma and accepted a job at a local supermarket behind the deli counter. When the supermarket merged with another company, Carmen was out of a job.

Family contacts helped her secure another job on the assembly line at Ford Motor Co., where she was laid off after a year and a half.

Her next job, working for an independent grocer, also ended in a layoff.

Indeed, Carmen was out of work - but not out of determination.

"I swore right then and there that I would never let myself get laid off again," said Roxanne. "I simply would not let myself get into that predicament."

Romulus resident makes food almost too beautiful to enjoy

By BETH SUNDRLA
ANP Staff Writer

Preparing food isn't just a kitchen routine for Phyllis Anderson, of Romulus. It's an art form. She invites guests to her home often and takes great pains to make the meal unforgettable.

"If a person is special to me, I want the meal to be special," she said.

Anderson doesn't just cook food. She dresses it up with garnishes and makes centerpieces, such as a palm tree and grass hut made from fruits and vegetables.

To create that special ambience, she even dresses to the culture of the food she's making.

Anderson has African, Japanese and Chinese outfits and wears lounging dresses with unusual accessories. She hopes to get Indian and Hawaiian outfits in the future.

"I believe in wearing different outfits when I serve the food. Dressing up makes me feel like my company knows I'm interested in them," she said.

Born in Inkster, Anderson lived in Rhode Island for two years and has lived in Wayne and Romulus. She has a love of cooking and trying new things.

"I'm not afraid to taste anything, so that helps," she said.

She made up a black-eyed-pea dish after she tasted one in a restaurant.

"I couldn't get the recipe, so I made up my own," she said.

Anderson has always loved to cook.

"My mother was older - she was 45 when I was born - and she had a lot of patience with me," Anderson said.

At John Glenn High School, she took a culinary arts course. She also goes to Kitchen Glamor, in Redford, and takes community courses in cooking.

Along with courses, she also reads cookbooks and clips pictures and recipes from magazines. Anderson recommends reading a variety of cookbooks. She often goes to the library to obtain books, in addition to buying some of her own.

Her dream is to make culinary arts her career.

"I've got two little ones now, so I'm not able to do all the things I would like to," she said.

Currently, Anderson works in the Romulus post office.

Her son, Aaron, is 6, and her daughter, Christa, is 7. She also has a daughter, Alana, 18, who is interested in cooking.

"All my kids get right in there and cook," she said. "I try to get the kids involved in fixing pretty food. I want them to know the importance of it."

Anderson's husband, Billy, is involved with the cooking, as well.

Anderson loves to have guests over to eat and stays wound up for days planning meals.

"If I'm going to cook oriental food, then I have to think that way," she said.

Different types of cooking interest Anderson.

"You have to learn not to be afraid to mess up. I have my goof-ups, but I take them with a smile and learn from them," she said.

A good way to learn to cook, according to Anderson, is to watch other cooks and talk to them about food. When Anderson goes to a restaurant, she's not shy about asking the chef for his secrets.

"I stand there with my nosy self and even ask how they folded the napkins. I'll go to the cook and say, 'This is the only place I have eaten this. How did you do this?'" she said.

"Chefs like to teach you. They like to tell you how they do what they do," she said.

Among Anderson's more unusual dishes are her shark recipe, black-eyed pea recipes and special rice dish.

"I like to take soul food and make it gourmet," she said.

Here are a few of her secrets for sharing.

SHARK WITH LEMON BUTTER

4 shark steaks
1/4 cup soy sauce
Juice of 1 lemon
Lemon butter

Marinate steaks overnight in soy sauce and lemon mixture. Grill steaks on barbecue grill for 10 minutes on each side. Baste with lemon butter.

PHYLLIS' RICE DISH

3 cups cooked rice
1 teaspoon curry powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 onion
1/2 green pepper
2 tablespoons peanut oil
1 egg
Bean sprouts
1 7-ounce can of tiny shrimp

Mix rice, curry powder, salt together and refrigerate overnight.

Saute onion, green pepper, peanut oil. Add rice. Stir together. Move rice to edges of pan and scramble an egg in the center. Then stir together with rice and add a handful of bean sprouts and shrimp. Serve.

RIBS

2 spare ribs (have butcher cut in strips horizontally making 3 strips)
1 cup vinegar
Juice of one lemon
1/2 cup soy sauce
2 cloves garlic, chopped

Remove visible fat from ribs. Put vinegar, lemon, soy sauce, garlic in with ribs and marinate overnight.

When ready to cook, prepare fire on barbecue grill and allow to burn for 30 minutes. Then add three chunks of soaked hickory wood, which have been soaked in water while the fire was burning.

Put ribs on grill, cover. Keep marinade sauce in cup and sprinkle periodically until done (about 2 hours).

Remove the ribs and cut each one separately. Pour on your favorite sauce. Place them in a large roaster and bake for 30 minutes at 350 degrees.

My generous sister is trying to 'trifle' with my emotions

My sister is a genius.

Her genius manifested itself (again) recently at the dinner table when she took one of our favorite desserts and made it even better. Now, please understand, the dessert in question was English Trifle, and there is only one thing in the world that could possibly make any improvement in this ancient and ambrosial creation. My sister found the only way to improve it...she made it CHOCOLATE.

Perhaps my love of chocolate may have been previously mentioned on these pages. There is nothing in my life quite like chocolate and my sister, genius that she is, shares this opinion. Completely. Actually, she may be the one person in the world as addicted as I am to the wonderful, glorious and medicinal properties of the cocoa bean.

Here is her glorious rendition of a classic dessert. I guarantee enjoyment.

CHOCOLATE TRIFLE

4 cups plus 2 tablespoons heavy cream, chilled
1 cup milk

4 ounces semi-sweet chocolate, grated
5 eggs
1/2 cup plus 2 tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon cornstarch
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
3 ounces white chocolate, grated
Chocolate Loaf Cake (recipe follows)
2/3 cup strawberry jam
1/4 cup brandy
1/3 cup dry sherry
1/3 cup slivered almonds
Fresh strawberries or grated semisweet chocolate for garnish

In a heavy saucepan, combine 2 cups of the cream with the milk. Bring just to a boil over moderate heat. Remove from heat and stir in the semisweet chocolate until melted.

In a medium mixer bowl, beat the eggs until foamy. Beat in 1/2 cup sugar and the cornstarch until thoroughly mixed, about one minute. Gradually stir the chocolate cream into the eggs until well blended. Pour into a heavy medium saucepan and cook, stirring constantly, until thick and creamy, about 10 minutes. Do not let boil. Remove from heat and stir in the vanilla. Cover with plastic wrap and let cool to room temperature.

In a small heavy saucepan, combine 2 tablespoons of the cream with the remaining 2 tablespoons sugar. Cook over moderately low heat, stirring until dissolved. Remove from heat and stir in the white chocolate mixture.

Trim the crusts from the Chocolate Loaf Cake and cut in half lengthwise and then into 1/2-inch-thick slices. Line the bottom of a 4-quart glass serving bowl with half the slices, trimming if necessary. Spread half the jam over the cake slices in the bowl.

In a small bowl, mix the brandy and sherry. Pour half over the cake and sprinkle with half the almonds.

Using a rubber spatula, pour half the semisweet chocolate custard over the first layer of cake in the bowl. Arrange the remaining slices of cake on top and spread with the remaining 1/3 cup jam. Sprinkle the remaining liquor and almonds over the jam and cover with the last of the semisweet chocolate custard. Top with the white chocolate whipped cream and cover with plastic wrap. Refrigerate the trifle for at least several hours, or overnight, before serving. Decorate the top with fresh strawberries or grated semisweet chocolate if desired.

Robichaud, Willow Run share conference swim championship

By TOM MOORADIAN
ANP Staff Writer

From start-to-finish, the 1988 Suburban Athletic Conference Swimming & Diving Championships staged last week at Dearborn Heights Robichaud was a cliffhanger.

Robichaud, the host, exchanged dual meet victories with Willow Run, the defending SAC champ, during the course of the regular season.

Therefore, the team that finished atop of the SAC conference meet could stake claim to the team championship.

The league meet finished in a "dead heat" with Robichaud and Willow Run garnering 337 points apiece. Those point totals assured the two frontrunners of co-championships.

"It was close from beginning to end," said Robichaud Coach Jim Hadley whose Bulldogs ended a four-year title drought, but earned their 11th title in 15 years. "Our kids swam well, but in at least four races we were touched out at the finish."

"One victory in any of those four close races would have made the difference," Hadley added.

With Robichaud and Willow Run dividing first place honors, Oak Park finished behind the co-champs with 159 points. Highland Park had 147 while River Rouge was fifth with 98.

Inkster and Ecorse, the remaining two SAC affiliates, didn't field teams for the 1987-88 season.

Robichaud did produce three league champs: Mike Klix, a senior, ended his prep swim career with a 25.0 effort in the 50-yard freestyle to win the gold medal and all-conference consideration in that event.

Klix's teammate, Robby Patrick, came through with a 1:04.88 to win the 100-yard backstroke event. The 14-year-old sophomore has two more years of varsity eligibility ahead of him and should set all kinds of records before he finishes his prep career.

Robichaud's third league champ is freshman Robert Stewart who was clocked in the winning time of 1:04.88 in taking the 100-yard breaststroke.

"Stewart has a very bright swim future," Hadley noted. "It isn't often you get a freshman in here with that much talent. If he continues to work hard, he will make his presence felt on the state level."

Maurice Brantley A Tiger on the loose

Belleville gives coach winning season

Tigers take on Taylor Truman tonight in district playoffs

By TOM MOORADIAN
ANP Staff Writer

No matter what happens at this week's Class A district basketball play-offs at Wayne Memorial, Belleville High cagers last week assured their first-year head coach Michael Garland with a winning season.

The Tigers went out and presented Garland with a third-place finish in the Wolverine 'A' Conference with an impressive 64-56 triumph over Southgate Anderson.

The victory was Belleville's ninth in 14 conference starts and their 12th overall in 20 trips to the hardwood this season. The 9-5 record left the Tigers looking up at only Monroe, which dethroned Wayne Memorial, in the final conference standings. Monroe is sole-owner of the Wolverine 'A' Conference title.

The Tigers will return to cage action today at 6 p.m. in the semifinal round of the district tournament at Wayne. They drew a first round bye and will play Taylor Truman.

"This district is up for grabs, and I believe that the team that plays the best will win it."

— Mike Garland
Belleville Coach

Romulus is scheduled to play Wayne Memorial at 8 p.m. Wayne ousted Taylor Kennedy in the first round Monday night. The championship will be decided at 7 p.m. on Friday with the district champ advancing to the Eastern Michigan University regionals scheduled for next week.

Garland believes that the district title is up for grabs. Romulus had won the last two versions, beating Wayne both times in very close and hotly-contested games.

"This district is up for grabs, and I believe that the team that plays the best will win it," Garland commented.

Maurice Brantley and Al Tilman combined for 44 of Belleville's 64 points against Anderson as the Tigers leaped from a 16-8 first-period lead to stay in command 30-24 at halftime. The Belleville defense gave up on three points in the third period, upping the Tiger advantage to 43 to 27 for three periods. There was no doubt about the outcome of the game after that. "We had an opportunity to play a lot of our kids," said Garland later. "I would have to say that the kids are as ready as they ever will be for the play-offs."

Brantley, who scored 13 of his team high 26 points in the first half, saw less than 2 1/2 quarters of action. Tilman chipped in with 18 points for the Tigers who will need to brush up on their foul-shooting if they hope to be a factor at the Wayne tournament.

Belleville canned 12 of 21 free throws.

Belleville has an excellent shot at the district title, but they must remain healthy in order to reach their goal. Truman will be a good indicator of just how well prepared Garland's club is for the tournament.

At full strength, Vikings humble Buena Vista

By TOM MOORADIAN
ANP Staff Writer

Gary Johnson is back. And the Inkster Vikings are rolling again.

The injured Johnson who missed most of the regular season with an injured ankle gave the Vikings the necessary lift that powered Coach George Thompson Jr.'s cagers past state-ranked Class B power, Saginaw Buena Vista, 81-62.

"Mentally I believe we are ready for the play-offs," said Thompson whose team launched their bid for the Class B district title at Bishop Borgess Monday night against Thurston. "Johnson looks healthy and the team wants to prove that they are better than a 11-9 team."

The winner of Monday's first round will advance to the semifinals at Borgess to play Crestwood in a 6 p.m. contest on Thursday. Last night, Robichaud was scheduled to play host, Bishop Borgess at 6 p.m., and at 8 p.m. Dearborn took on Divine Child. The two winners will clash Thursday at 8:30 p.m. in the semis.

The championship will be decided at 7:30 p.m. on Saturday.

In the meantime, the Vikings polished off Saginaw thanks to a balanced scoring attack that featured five players in double figures. Andy Hardy and Marvin Abney each had 18 while teammates Jim Poole and Johnson split 24 points. Lorenzo Terrell accounted for 14.

Inkster broke loose early as the Vikings got eight points from Hardy and seven from Abney to build up a 21-12 first period lead. However, Torrio Smith found the range with seven of his 15 points to rally Saginaw back in the next eight minutes. At the halfway mark, the Vikings boasted a 35-31 edge.

But with Hardy and Terrell setting a torrid pace and with Johnson coming up with four rebounds, two assists and a pair of blocked shots, Inkster took command and outscored their rivals 21-9 in the third period to pull away for good. The Vikings led by 16 points (56-40) after three periods.

"Everyone contributed to this victory," said Thompson whose club has posted a 11-9 overall record going into the play-offs. "I am especially pleased with the balanced scoring we got from the kids. It shows that they can get the job done when they need to."

The coaches in the Suburban Athletic Conference met Sunday to selected the 1987-88 all-conference team. Coaches

All-Area wrestlers to make their debuts

With Redford Catholic Central topping Hazel Park for the Class A state wrestling title, the 1987-88 high school wrestling season came to an abrupt end over the weekend.

Local wrestling fans, however, can look forward to yet another thrilling highlight of the season - The Associated Newspapers' All-Area Wrestling Team.

In its 25th year, the ANP elite club this year will feature a Class A state champ, Romulus High's Tony Venturini, one of the finest wrestlers to compete in this area. The team also will include local wrestlers who made it to the state finals along with a "Coach of the Year."

The complete team and coach will be revealed after the coaches cast their ballots and the votes are counted by the ANP sports staff.

Romulus cage machine picks up momentum

By TOM MOORADIAN
ANP Staff Writer

With the return of high-scoring Brent Bonam into their lineup and wrapping up the regular season with a good outing against Southgate Aquinas, defending Class A district champ, Romulus, is ready to defend its title.

However, coach Dan Henry is the first to admit that it won't be easy.

"We have been playing well lately," said Henry after his team dropped a 64-53 non-conference decision to Aquinas after whipping Taylor Center last week. "We didn't have Brent (Bonam) because of injuries, but he should be ready for the play-offs."

Romulus will place its district crown on the block tonight at 8 p.m. when it takes on Wayne Memorial in the semifinal round of the tournament. After being ranked among the top five Metro West teams most of the season, the Zebras of Wayne have inexplicably fallen on hard times. They lost to Belleville and Trenton and handed over their Wolverine 'A' Conference title to Monroe for the first time in three years.

Like most coaches in the district, Henry believes that the championship is up in the air. "I believe it will come down to who is playing well at the time. Anyone of these teams can win it."

The championship at Wayne will be decided 7 p.m. Friday.

Henry's Eagles will take a 6-14 won-lost overall and a 1-7 South Central Conference record into tonight's play-offs.

Romulus showed signs of greatness against Aquinas but a 19-10 Aquinas scoring advantage in the fourth quarter led to the Eagles' 64-53 loss. Aquinas, behind 6-1 forward Darnell Tidwell's scoring power, jumped 15-9 lead over the slow-igniting Romulus quintet. Then, with Willie Maull and Grayam Scott keeping the Eagles alive, Romulus managed to stay in the game 33-26 at half time. Again Maull came up with a couple of crucial steals that opened the door to a 17-12 Romulus third period which slashed Aquinas' lead to only two points (45-43) going into the fourth period.

But the Eagles could not find the hoop in the final eight minutes.

Personal fouls also played a key role in this one: Romulus capitalized on three of 11 against Aquinas' 20 of 28 free throws. And that was "really the difference in the game," said Henry.

"There was also a streak in that fourth period in which we had four possessions and didn't get a shot," Henry said. "And that made a big difference."

Maull connected on six field goals and also tossed in two 3-pointers to go along with his two of six from the free throw line for his team high 20 points. Scott chipped in with 13 points.

However, Tidwell stole individual scoring honors with his 24-point output. Steve Pollack accounted for 17 for the winners.

Earlier in the week Romulus buried Taylor Center 86-66 for its best offensive game of the season. The Eagles flew to a 47-29 first half, giving Henry an

Chapman repeats as All American

By TOM MOORADIAN
ANP Staff Writer

Doug Chapman may have not reached his goal, that of winning a National Collegiate Athletic Association Division II wrestling title, but he came close.

And that counts for All-America recognition.

Chapman, a junior who won the Great Lakes Conference and the regional title as a member of the Ferris State University team, finished fourth at the NCAA Tournament staged last week in Nebraska-Omaha.

The fourth-place finish earned him a berth on the NCAA Division II All-American team, according to Ferris officials. It is Chapman's second appearance on the elite team.

Chapman, a former Belleville High wrestling great who has matured into a solid 190-pound grappler, launched his bid for the elusive national title against Adams Cole out of California. The local grappler humbled his opponent in seven minutes and won on a technical foul.

However, in the second round of the tournament Chapman ran into trouble against North Dakota's Matt Palmer who won a close 8-6 decision over the Ferris wrestler. Palmer went on to finish second best in the weight class.

Chapman bounced back and found a familiar rival in Grand Rapids's Jim Koeber whom he had twice beaten during the course of the 1988 season. He did it a third time, 12-3, to move into the quarter-finals.

Belleville qualifies 3 for regional gymnastics final

By TOM MOORADIAN
ANP Staff Writer

Coach Judy Marr and Belleville High will send a delegation of three to the Class A regional gymnastics finals scheduled for Saturday at Hillsdale.

The Tigers who lost several key performers due to academic ineligibility will be represented at Hillsdale by Ann Oles, Sherry Ostrowski and Kim Pinson.

Oles qualified in the floor exercise event. Her top score for the season is a 8.1 (out of a possible 10). Ostrowski will compete in the uneven bars event while Pinson made the grade in the vault.

"I am really proud of these kids," said Marr. "These kids have worked really hard to reach this special goal. Unfortunately, we have had our share of unexpected problems, but we have been able to get over them."

Belleville brought the curtains down on the dual meet season, losing to Ann Arbor Huron 120-112.5.

Pinson accounted for a second place in the vault as she was awarded a 7.65 for her efforts. She also placed third on the uneven bars when she was awarded a score of 7.0. Ostrowski came through with a second place on the balanced beam as she received a 7.65 for her efforts.

Bev Thomas and Oles tied for third place on the beam when each received 7.5. Oles also finished third in the floor exercise (7.9).

Despite the loss of several topnotch performers, Marr said she is optimistic about the gymnastics program.

"We have some hard-working youngsters," she stressed, "and that's important at this point. Our goal right now is to work on the fundamentals and get our qualifying gymnasts ready for the regionals."

Huron cagers end league campaign with big victory

By TOM MOORADIAN
ANP Staff Writer

New Boston Huron cagers waited for their final conference game of the 1988 season to unleash their offense.

Scoring a season-high 83 points, Coach Larry Swick's Chiefs scalped Monroe Jefferson 83-69. The victory was only their third in 14 conference starts but it was considered crucial to Huron's fortunes in the district play-offs.

"We needed something like this to give us a morale-booster," said Swick who sent his troops up against Carlson in the first round of the play-offs Monday night. Carlson had twice defeated the Chiefs in conference competition this season.

But Huron looked like a different team after the first quarter against Jefferson. After taking the lead 18-14 first the first eight minutes, the Chiefs went on a rampage and put 26 points on the scoreboard while holding their opponents to five in the next frame.

With a lopsided 44-19 half time cushion, Swick was able to use all of his troops most of the second half.

Andy Jackson, who drilled in 11 of his 21 points in that pivotal second period, connected on seven field goals, two of them three-pointers. He also had a perfect 5-for-5 night at the free throw line. Also in double figures for the winners were Mike Harrison who contributed 17 and Dave Spiecker who had 12.

The Chiefs looked sharp at the free throw line for this one as they capitalized on 22 of 27 chances - their best of the season.

Jefferson responded with 17 points from Nick Schinavare.

Huron took a 3-11 league and a 5-14 overall record into the district play-offs.

In the meantime, the Huron Conference coaches got together Monday night and selected their All-Conference teams. Grosse Ile, which captured the conference title, filled two berths on the First Team. Representing the reigning champs are Joe Skasigard, who also was named the league's MVP, and Steve Klein, the Islanders' rugged center.

Teaming with Skasigard and Klein on the starting team are: Chuck Collart (Airport), Doug Lipford (Monroe Catholic Central), Chris Boller (Carlson), and Joe Sommer (Riverview).

New Boston's contribution to the mythical team is its top scorer and all-around player, Andy Jackson, who earned Second Team recognition. Also named on the team are Darrell Mossberg (Airport), Jeff Lee (Grosse Ile), Nick Schinavare (Monroe Jefferson), Dan Cameron (Carlson) and Brian Niemi (Carlson).

When Bill Brooks, the Wayne public address announcer, introduced Shawn Wimberly to the crowd, he referred to the senior as "Wayne's franchise player." And the 6-foot, 2-inch Wimberly did everything he could to prove Brook's statement correct.

Wimberly scored 35 points to lead the Zebras to a 74-60 win over Taylor-Kennedy Monday night in the first round of the Wayne district at Wayne Memorial High School.

But it wasn't just on the offensive side that Wimberly excelled. His defensive performance was the key to the game.

Steve Avery, a 6-foot, 4-inch senior who averaged 23 points per game for Taylor Kennedy, scored 13 points in the first half and converted his first two shots in the third quarter giving the visitors a 42-40 lead.

Wayne coach Chuck Henry had seen enough and put Wimberly on Avery. The strategy paid off as Avery scored just four points the rest of the way.

"That was definitely the turning point of the game," said Henry, whose Zebras will face Romulus tonight at 8 p.m. in the semifinals.

"I didn't start that way because I was afraid he might get in foul trouble, and because he has so much to do on offense, I was a little hesitant to do it.

"But his quickness did a real good job on him."

Wimberly realized his offense might suffer from the switch but took it as a challenge.

"I was a little tired, but I knew I had to do it at both ends of the floor," said Wimberly, who was being watched by scouts from the University of Wisconsin.

"He (Avery) is a good player. The toughest I've guarded all year."

The first half was back and forth, with Wayne clinging to a slim lead the whole way.

Hadley's two relay teams were touched out by their counterparts from Willow Run. Hadley explained his strategy for the relays this way: "I placed two of my top swimmers in the medley and had them lead off, and we lost by fractions of a second in both events."

In the medley, the Bulldogs were represented by Patrick, Stewart, Ken Wood and Gerald Petre who combined on a 1:55.46. The Flyers beat them to the wall, showing a 1:55.37 for their winning performance.

In the final relay, the 400-yard freestyle, Hadley's lineup included Klix, the Francis brothers - Jason and Joe - along with Chris Davenport. The foursome was clocked in the second best time of 3:55.94, while the winners (Willow Run) came through with a 3:52.73.

Robichaud's entries in diving, Ken Wood and Tony Lario, earned third and fifth place recognition and qualified for last night's Class B regional competitions at Chelsea High School.

Wood piled up 285.55 points on the boards for his third place and Lario finished with 244.65, good for fifth place.

Before bringing the curtains down on the 1988 season the Bulldogs will compete on Thursday in the Dearborn Heights City Meet, hosted at Crestwood.

"I believe we will fare pretty well over there," Hadley commented. "Crestwood and Annapolis have some fairly good swimmers and I believe our kids can swim with them. It should be an interesting meet."

Robichaud will take a 7-1 won-lost conference dual meet record and a 13-2 won-lost overall record into the season's finale.

Chiefs crash into Airport

By TOM MOORADIAN
ANP Staff Writer

New Boston Huron, soundly defeated by Airport twice during the conference season, will have one more shot at their arch-rivals when the two meet in the first round of the Class B district basketball play-offs Monday night at Airport.

Airport turned back Coach Larry Swick's Chiefs Friday night 83-65 to end their conference year with a 10-3 record. They're 13-5 on the year. Huron has a makeup game tonight at home against Monroe Jefferson. The Chiefs will take a 2-11 and 4-14 record into tonight's game.

"Airport has beaten us up pretty good the two times we have met this year," Swick said, "but we're hoping to turn things around. We are going to have to stop Collert (Chuck) if we are going to have any success against them."

Collert, a 6-0 forward, rattled the nets Friday night for 31 points to lead his team to victory. Teammate Bill Bondy added 20 points.

Airport pulled away from a 21-11 first period lead and established a 41-25 half time advantage before outscoring their rivals 23-18 in the third frame.

The Chiefs again received an outstanding performance from Andy Jackson who scored a team-high 20 points. Also in double figures for Huron was Mike Debozy with 14.

The Chiefs managed to keep the outcome of their game against nonconference rival, Lincoln Park, in doubt until midway in the third quarter. After holding a shaky 45-44 lead at midway, Huron fell to the Railsplitters 92-76.

The Chiefs lost three of their starters - John Spiecker, Mike Harrison and Debozy to fouls. Jackson sparked the loser with a career-high 30 points Spiecker, before he fouled out, contributed 21.

Here are the Class B district pairings for Airport district tournament.

Schools seek joint cable effort

Romulus School Board Trustee Howard Kesner may soon be contacting Mayor Beverly McAnally in an effort to combine forces.

According to Kesner, Barden Cable Television spokesmen agreed to provide $10,000 to the schools for the purchase of programming equipment for the schools. Kesner noted that the city was also promised $10,000 for the same purpose and that by combining efforts and eliminating duplication, a more sophisticated and serviceable system might be provided for the use of the schools and the city.

Assistant Superintendent of Schools Dr. Terrel LeCesne noted that the contract for the wiring for cable at the high school had already been bid, but that the schools might benefit from a combination of efforts.

Dr. William Bedell, superintendent of Romulus schools, suggested that a committee be appointed to contact the city regarding the situation.

Board President Pat Patterson noted, "Let's meet with them and say, 'This is what we'd like to do, what would you like?'"

Westland youths arraigned

Two 17-year-olds were arraigned recently on charges of breaking and entering as part of a robbery ring in Canton Township and other communities.

Michael Fascik and Eric Longnecker, both of Westland, were arraigned before Judge James Garber, of the 35th District Court, according to David Boljesic, Canton Township police spokesman.

Fascik was charged with two counts of breaking and entering, and Longnecker faces one count, Boljesic said.

Bond was set for Fascik at $15,000 or 10 percent. For Longnecker, bond was set at $2,500 or 10 percent, Boljesic said.

A third person, a juvenile, has been petitioned to the juvenile court, Boljesic said.

Canton police, along with police officials in several other communities, have been investigating a breaking and entering ring in the area.

THE PACEMAKER— AN EXCELLENT SOLUTION FOR SOME HEART CONDITIONS

By John W. Vincent, M.D.

The pacemaker is truly one of the miracles of modern medical technology. It's an electrical generator that's used very successfully for patients with certain heartbeat irregularities. About the size of a pocket watch, the pacemaker is placed surgically inside the chest near the collar bone and is worn very comfortably. It controls timing and makes the heart beat with regularity.

Some of the newest pacemakers have improved capabilities. They can automatically increase the heartbeat as the patient's activity increases, and are no longer affected by microwave ovens, vacuum cleaners, or electric motors. A word of caution though, electric arc welding is still a problem for even the latest models.

WHOM WILL THE PACEMAKER HELP?

There are three heart conditions where a pacemaker is needed the most.

- First, after a heart attack, patients often are left with an irregular heartbeat. Their heart's electrical system no longer functions properly. An irregular rhythm is sometimes life threatening. A pacemaker, either for temporary or permanent use, may help correct this problem.

- Second, persons who suffer from a very slow heart rate alternating with a very fast heart rate are vulnerable to congestive heart failure and need to have their heart rate regulated.
- The third indicator for a pacemaker concerns the patient who has complete heart block—the lack of electrical transmission from the auricle to the ventricle. With complete heart block, a patient can have a prolonged episode of no heart beat at all. When this happens, the patient can pass out suddenly from lack of oxygen to the brain.

HOW LONG DO PACEMAKERS LAST?

The life of a pacemaker depends on how much the heart relies on the device. The good news is, even with the hardest wear, the most recent pacemakers last for approximately seven years before they have to be replaced.

However, as with any machine, problems can occur. Wearers of pacemakers should be followed closely by their physician or cardiologist. Periodic evaluation can be done by telephone or direct office exam.

In addition, patients should learn to take their own pulse daily.

Nurse

She headed for the Michigan Employment Security Commission, where she took an aptitude test to find out where her best skills would best be put to use. "They told me that I would make a good nurse, and I couldn't believe them," said Carmen. "I had dropped out of school 25 years ago. I never even finished high school. And here they were trying to get me to go to college and get a nursing degree. "I told the woman at the MESC office that I was just too old to go off to college and start working toward that kind of a career," Carmen said. "And besides, college costs money. I just knew I could never afford to go to nursing school," she continued. But the worker at the MESC office pointed Carmen in the right direction and told her about the various types of grants and financial-aid packages she could seek.

"Suddenly, there I was, standing in front of the door to a college classroom. I had received money from a Pell Grant, and I had books... everything I needed - except the courage to walk into the building," Carmen remembered. "I recall waiting until the 'right' moment to go through the doors. After all, it had been 25 years since I had left school." Once she found the 'right' moment, Carmen continued heading back to her classroom - despite a few challenges along the way. "I lacked the discipline needed to do well at first. I remember sitting in lecture hall, listening intently to what the professor was saying and understanding it all. But when I took the test later on, I failed. I had neglected to take notes," she explained. After the first failed test, Carmen pulled herself together, developed her own style of studying and managed to still earn an A in the class. But the days of hard breaks weren't ended yet. Carmen was rejected when first applying to a nursing school, and the instinct to never return to school the next semester for her pre-nursing training was great. "I sometimes just wanted to change my goals, maybe get into computers. I was afraid of being rejected that second time, of going through all the work just to get knocked down," she said. That time, however, Carmen was accepted into the nursing school. And for the next three years, she worked toward attaining her goal of becoming a nurse. But she didn't stop with nursing classes.

"I was amazed at how much knowledge there is out there for us. There are so many things for people to learn, if they really want to. I enjoy college because it is such a learning experience," Carmen said. "I feel more fulfilled now. I am not saying that education is for everybody, but I must say that I highly recommend it," she continued. "I have come to appreciate things differently. I feel that I am an equal now, that people cannot talk down to me as if I were a high school dropout anymore. I feel like I can now begin my life. Education has opened up many new doors for me."

just make it that much easier for them if they could have an idea, so that they won't waste a lot of time and money in college switching around," said Wood. To avoid this, Wood said Glenn offers a variety of career-oriented classes, geared toward showing students the many job options to consider. Winter said Wayne High also offers career-oriented courses, as well as career counseling. "Our career counselors are always busy," Winter said. "Ten or more years ago, many of our students were able to leave high school and go on down the street to the Ford Motor Co., where they could be making $10 an hour. But that's not the case anymore," Winter continued. Nevertheless, Wood said graduates today are aware of the highly competitive job market and are making the necessary adjustments to prepare for their entry in it. "Graduates are much more sophisticated, and I think they want to get ahead so much so that they are constantly thinking ahead. They are eager to gain as much as they can out of their educational experience, and that's a very positive thing for teachers to see," Wood said.

BLACK-EYED PEA SALAD

- 1 pound fresh black-eyed peas
- 1 pound fresh green peas
- 3 slices corned beef
- 3 slices ham
- 3 slices turkey
- 1/2 tablespoon smokey hickory flavor
- 3 tablespoons Italian dressing
- 1 celery stalk
- 1 onion

Dice meat into small pieces. Add both kinds of peas, hickory flavor, dressing, celery, onion to meat and let sit overnight. Serve.

PHYLIS' MACARONI AND CHEESE

- 1 pound box of macaroni
- Green pepper
- Onion
- 1 package Hidden Valley Ranch buttermilk dressing
- 4 cups of milk
- Extra sharp New York cheddar cheese
- 1 can cheddar cheese soup

Cook macaroni. Saute green pepper and onion and add to drained macaroni. Pour in salad dressing. Melt cheese and add cheddar soup and milk. Add one egg. Pour sauce over macaroni and bake 20 minutes at 350 degrees.

Kitchen notes...

For garnishes, Anderson has specialties or follows different pictures she finds and adds her own touch. To make a palm tree, take one cucumber and gash the sides on an angle to resemble palm tree bark. Take green peppers and slice almost in half, leaving bottom together. Slice top edges with small slits to make palm leaves. Place peppers upside down on top of cucumber. Place green grapes on top of pineapples. To make a grass hut, cut top off pineapple and hollow out. Carve door into side. Turn upside down and place pineapple leaves on top of pineapple attach with toothpicks. Cover top with parsley. To add color to her meals Anderson uses different types of lettuces, such as purple or green and white savory lettuce. She also uses mustard greens for decoration as well as strawberries, eggplants and carrots to add color.

CHOCOLATE LOAF CAKE

- 4 tablespoons unsalted butter, softened
- 1/2 cup sugar

- 2 ounces semisweet chocolate, melted
- 1/2 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 2 eggs
- 1 cup all-purpose flour
- 1 teaspoon baking powder

Preheat the oven to 325 degrees. Grease a 7 1/2-by-3 1/2-by-2 1/2-inch loaf pan.

In a large mixer bowl, beat together the butter and sugar until light and fluffy, about five minutes. Add the melted chocolate and vanilla and mix until well blended. the batter and mix well. Repeat with the remaining flour. Turn into the prepared pan and spread evenly.

Bake the cake for one hour, or until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean. Let stand for about five minutes before inverting onto a rack to cool.

Spring cleaning

Warm weather signals time for shampooing and repairing

Spring is a good time to repair those small dings and scratches your car finish has accumulated during the winter months, according to the Southfield-based Automotive Information Council.

These small openings in the car finish let in moisture, which when combined with oxygen, can cause the metal underneath to rust. A deep scratch can develop into a major problem if it is not taken care of quickly.

Before using any type of touch-up paint, the surface around the nick or scratch must be cleaned of dirt and rust. Paint won't adhere to a dirty surface or stop rust; it will only hide the problem for awhile. For a large rust repair, sand down to the bare metal, using a fine grade of sandpaper. For a small scratch with some rust present, try to chip off the rust with the edge of a razor blade.

Mask the area around the scratch to protect the windows, chrome, tires and trim from paint. Use newspapers and hold in place with masking tape.

On a larger rust repair that requires sanding the paint surface down to the bare metal, the first coat of paint should always be a primer. This protects against further rust and gives a smooth base for the final coat of paint. Follow the directions on the label and allow enough time for the primer to dry before applying the final coat.

To check the color match of any touch-up paint, spray or brush a small amount inside a door jamb. When applying a spray paint, use several thin coats rather than one heavy coat. For a small paint repair that does not require sanding down to the bare metal, use a small bottle of touch-up paint and a brush. Dab on the paint and let it run into the scratch.

Let the renewed finish set before using a rubbing compound to blend in the new paint with the rest of the finish. Finally, give the car a good coat of wax.

Clean cars worth more

The glut of used vehicles on the market has underscored the importance of extensive, comprehensive automotive cleaning.

Even a smooth-running machine won't sell if it's caked with dirt, grease, and stains.

In order to get the most out of their investment, many auto owners are turning to professional car improvement specialists to maintain their vehicle's showroom condition. Regular maintenance of the vehicle body, engine, passenger areas, and trunk give those owners a big advantage at resale time.

"As new car prices escalate, total car protection becomes even more important," according to Dan Janssen, president of Ziebart Corporation.

"When you have to spend almost $13,000 for a new car and finance it for five or six years, you only hope the car lasts longer than the payments," Janssen said. "Proper maintenance - rust protection as well as total car protection - will extend the life of your new vehicle and bring you a greater payback at resale or trade-in time."

Ziebart, which is observing its 25th anniversary this year, has some 600 service centers in 35 countries.

The firm believes that consistent cleaning of a vehicle, throughout its life, is essential to prolonging that value. Especially after a winter, when a car has experienced huge doses of cold temperatures, moisture, and road dirt, cleaning is imperative.

Ziebart recommends the following steps this spring:

- A high-pressure wash for the underside and exterior of a vehicle to remove dirt and grime.
- Application of a high-grade car wax to restore a vehicle's shine and beauty.
- Power vacuuming of the passenger seats, carpeting and trunk.
- Chemical shampoo to restore the fabric new-car texture and appearance ■

Procrastinators pay dearly for auto care

A new award is being suggested for all those car owners who just don't find time to get spring maintenance performed on their vehicles.

The recipients of this distinction know that car care in the spring is needed, but they put it off, and just don't get around to it.

To remind them to get around to it, the award they should be presented is a round Tu-It.

Examples of many of the extra costs and dangers possible when motorists don't get around to it:

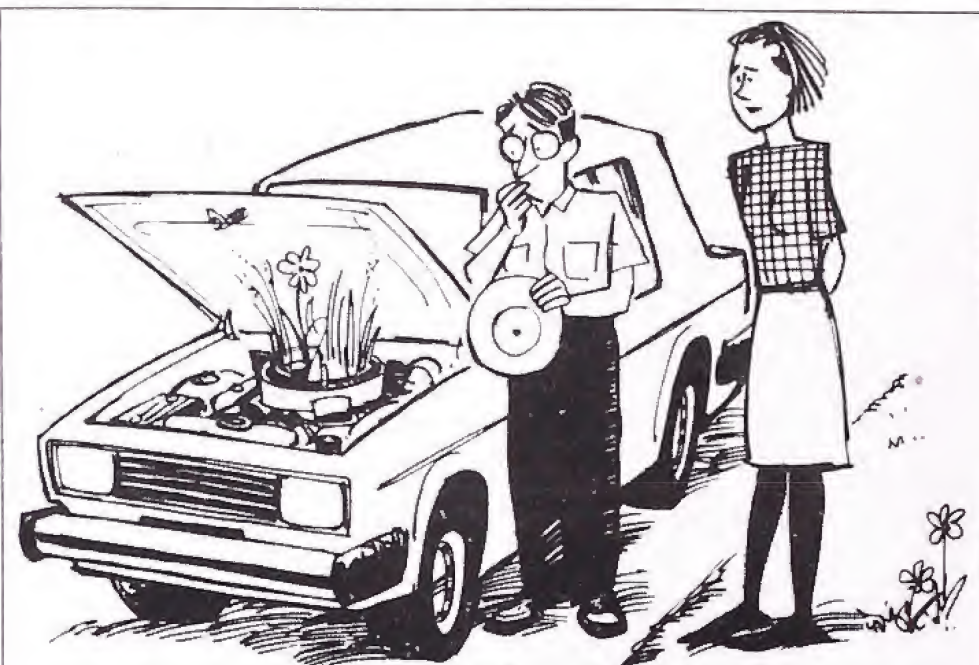

- MB drove away from the repair shop vowing he'd have that urgently needed front suspension work done soon. The mechanic had told him the ball joints were unsafe; that warning soon was confirmed. One of them failed on the way home and he narrowly missed a serious accident.

- CM was not so lucky. He 'totaled' his car because he delayed replacing worn windshield wiper blades, and couldn't see clearly when necessary.

- BC knew she needed a new alternator. She waited too long and her car let her down in a precarious situation.

- RM might have saved that $784 he spent on engine repairs had he not put off replacing a hose he knew was faulty.

- JS had even worse luck. It was a $1,600 engine job for him because he ignored the 'check engine' light too long. It ran out of oil.

"Honey, maybe for the car's birthday we should buy it a new air filter."

- PS had a close call, narrowly missing an accident because she had put off checking into strange noises coming from her car's brakes. She hadn't gotten around to it.

- No more excuses for JA, whose engine needed a tune-up. She had a frightening experience when, loaded with children, the car stalled in a busy intersection at rush hour. She had delayed that tune-up.

- AB was stuck in a flood when a radiator hose failed in the middle of a severe storm. Her husband later admitted that he knew the hose was rotten and had planned to replace it. He just had not gotten around to it.

A round Tu-It now can serve as a reminder to each of these persons that car care needs should be attended to when they first become apparent.

Check suspension, alignment

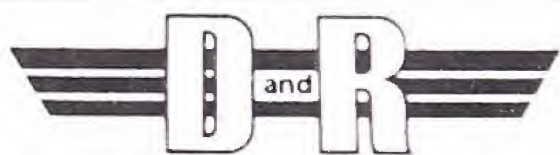

Two car care items, often neglected, but which have important safety and cost-of-repair implications, are suspension and alignment.

Suspension systems in need of repairs send out warning signals, according to the National Tire Dealers & Retreaders Association. The signals include: excessive bounce at front or rear ends when you push down on the bumper; rough, uncomfortable ride; and leaking seals or deteriorating rubber bushings in the shock absorbers.

If any of these problems are noticed, motorists should avoid excessive and expensive damage to their cars and tires by having them suspension system checked.

Alignment is simply keeping the car going straight. If the car seems to pull to one side or appears to be traveling at an angle while all four wheels are straight, or the tire tread is wearing unevenly, the car is probably out of alignment.

This could happen to a new or older car, the NTDRA advises. To avoid permanent damage and the risk of driving a vehicle in this condition, and examination by a specialist is recommended. ■

Prepare yourself with questions before taking car in for repair

Getting a car repaired properly requires effective communication between the vehicle owner and the repair shop personnel.

"One of the most common service complaints we receive involves missed communications," according to Wayne Young, technical services manager for the Automobile Club of Missouri. "A breakdown in this process can result in recurring symptoms, unnecessary repairs, lengthy delays, unexpected costs and much frustration for everyone."

He explained that both parties can create many barriers to good communications at a repair shop. A hurried atmosphere can be a typical problem created by a motorist rushing to work, or an understaffed shop. Shop personnel using technical jargon will intimidate some motorists and discourage further discussion. Such barriers all too frequently result in incorrect assumptions being made which lead to incorrect repair solutions, he said.

Young suggests the following steps to help any motorist communicate more effectively when discussing car repairs:

Know the players

Most service departments operate with a service manager, one or more service writers, shop foreman, and several mechanics. Smaller shops may combine several of these positions, and quite frequently, the shop owner will be responsible for writing the service orders.

A service writer is the person who greets you and writes the actual repair order. The shop foreman distributes work, supervises the mechanics, and provides some technical assistance. The service manager is responsible for department policy, warranties, pricing, and generally oversees the operation of the department.

Know pricing procedures

Repair shops generally charge for repairs based on a flat rate system, meaning they charge by established industry standards as opposed to actual repair time. Each manufacturer or publisher has a flat-rate manual that indicates in tenths of an hour, the length of time a particular operation is supposed to take. This time is multiplied by the hourly labor rate to arrive at a charge for a particular service.

The price of parts needed is added to this charge. Some shops assess a charge for miscellaneous shop supplies, such as shop towels, cleaners, etc. Usually, this charge is based on a small percentage of the labor or parts costs, up to a maximum of about $15. Other shops build this type of cost into their hourly labor rate.

How to explain the problems

When you drop your car off for servicing, it's usually best to report symptoms, rather than request a specific repair. For example, if your car is jerking as you accelerate to highway speeds, say so; don't simply ask for a tune-up.

If you find the symptoms difficult to describe, clearly write or type a list of them. Ask the service advisor to attach the list to the repair order so the mechanic can read the description of the problem in your own words.

Obtain an estimate

The first rule of thumb in seeking repairs is always get an estimate in writing. Verbal estimates can be forgotten or disputed. This is very important if you expect major repair costs. The estimate should be as detailed as possible, with prices for parts listed separately from labor charges.

Although some shops may charge a fee for a written estimate, they usually will deduct it if they do the repairs. Some types of repairs require a diagnosis before an accurate estimate can be written. Be sure to ask for the cost of such procedures.

Have the shop agree to contact you if the cost of repairs substantially exceeds the estimate, or if other repairs are found to be needed. If you feel unsure about the additional repairs, approve only the original ones.

The cost of a second opinion may be worthwhile if you need major repairs. Even if it is necessary to have the vehicle towed from one shop to another, it may be cheaper than having unnecessary repairs done.

Get a guarantee

Don't forget to investigate the guarantees a shop may offer on their parts and service. Typically, a shop

For best results and repairs, taking the car to the auto repair shop and merely dropping it off isn't recommended, car care experts contend. Auto mechanics say car owners should know their service department, know the "going rate" for prices of repairs, know how to explain the suspected problems, obtain a written estimate, ask about guarantees and return of used parts and read the owner's manual often to both save money and know how the car functions. By doing this, the experts say, car owners can rest assured that their car will perform for them many miles down the road.

offers a conditional guarantee of 4,000 miles or 90 days on parts and labor. If a shop's repair order does not contain the warranty policy, ask the shop to write the warranty on the repair order.

Also, make sure the repair order contains the date and car's mileage. A warranty could easily be disputed without this vital information.

Do not sign a repair order until you are convinced that the symptom is understood and the work guidelines you specified are acceptable.

Ask for parts return

By having the original parts returned or made available for your examination, you have some assurance that replacements were made. Even though you may not know what you are looking at, or even if the part is off your car, you have solid evidence to show another shop or someone with technical expertise.

Some parts, because of suppliers' return policies or warranty reasons, cannot be returned. However, you should be allowed to at least inspect the part when you pick up the car.

Know owner's manual

Knowing your car owner's manual will assist you in being an informed service customer. From it, you will learn about what is covered by warranty and how frequently systems typically need service, according officials from the Southfield-based Automotive Information Council.

The owner's manual is the single most important tool for keeping a car in good, running condition. AIC suggests all car owners should become familiar with the contents of the owner's manual. . . even as they are admiring their new car.

The owner's manual is the single most important tool for keeping a car in good running condition. AIC suggests all car owners should become familiar with the contents of the owner's manual . . . even as they are admiring their new car.

Along with the diagrams of where all the knobs, switches, levers and pedals are located, the manual also includes the car maintenance schedule. The maintenance schedule is a list of when to perform inspections or maintenance on virtually all of the car major systems. Following the service recommendations will help keep the car in top shape and, according to AIC, help avoid costly repairs.

Many manuals contain a service log to record the date and mileage when each maintenance job is performed. If a service log is not included, keep track of the service record in a small notebook, and also keep the notebook in your glove compartment.

Keeping a service log will not only help in keeping up with maintenance, it will also show potential buyers that the car has been conscientiously maintained when you decide to sell your car. In fact, it could be the best investment you'll ever make.

Care for your car for future

Taking the family car to the mechanic and knowing the language isn't important only for the life of the car. It could mean a much better vacation this summer.

More than 4.3 million family vacations or weekend recreational activities last year were interrupted because of vehicle problems or breakdowns en route.

A nationwide survey by the Champion Spark Plug Co. revealed that 5.1 percent - or about one out of every 20 families who took to the road last year - experienced a mechanical failure during the trip.

Why? James Kretzinger, Champion senior market research analyst, said that, although much pre-vacation maintenance was performed by Americans on their cars, large numbers of motorists neglected routine service prior to departing.

The Champion survey found that before leaving on a vacation or other trip of more than 150 miles:

- 28.5 percent of drivers will not change oil;
- 36.1 percent will not change oil filters;
- 61.3 percent will not change air filters;
- 80.8 percent will not replace spark plugs;
- 83.1 percent will not replace fuel filters;
- 71.9 percent will not have engines tuned;
- 11.6 percent will not check the condition of their tires;
- 40.9 percent will not check the cooling system;
- 31 percent will not check safety items - lights, brakes, wipers;
- 37.7 percent will not check transmission fluid; and
- 45.6 percent will not check power steering fluid.

"While all of these items may not have a direct responsibility for a vehicle breakdown, all are important in assuring safe, dependable and economical motoring," Kretzinger said.

"For example, tests have shown that cars in need of tune-ups can waste about 10 percent of the fuel they use. On a long trip, that can equate to a sizeable dollar savings."

Wiper care ensures a clear road ahead

Sometimes when car windshield wipers falter under precipitation, the wipers merely need a good cleaning to return them to safe operating conditions.

Anco, a manufacturer of windshield wiper products, recommends the following steps:

- Remove the windshield wiper blade from the wiper arm. It is much easier to clean when it is not attached to the car.

- Use a powder cleaner or detergent, one without gritty contaminants, which could later scratch the windshield. Make a paste of the cleaner.

Wipers should be replaced each year, auto experts say.

- Wipe in an up and down motion along the rubber wiper's edge. The important section to clean is the edge up to the first ridge of rubber.

- Rinse the wiper well.

- Clean the entire windshield, and return the blade to its place on the car.

When doing the cleaning, always use this opportunity to examine the wipers carefully. Check for tears in the rubber, blades that are bent, and a smooth flexing action of the moveable parts of the blade. If the rubber element is torn, new refills are needed. If the metal portions are bent or damaged, the entire blade will have to be replaced.

When the cleaned blades have been returned to their place on the car, squirt some water on the glass and try them. If the wiping quality is still lacking, the wipers are probably due for replacement.

The quality of the wipe provided by the windshield wipers is affected by wax from washes, grime and oils off the road, cleaners placed on vinyl tops, tar from the roads, and other dirt.

Periodic cleaning of your wipers will assure safe driving visibility. ■

Anti-lock brakes give drivers more safety

Anti-lock brake systems are another safety improvement automakers have introduced without any impetus from Congress, joining seat belts, padded instrument panels, energy absorbing steering wheels and numerous other safety innovations, according to the Automotive Information Council.

What is ABS? ABS is a system which automatically pumps the brakes of a car during hard braking or when the car is on a slippery surface. This pumping action prevents the car's wheels from "locking up," which can cause loss of control and skidding.

There are a couple of serious advantages ABS has over manual brake pumping. First, according to AIC, ABS can pump the brakes between three and 15 times per second, depending on which system is installed. That rate is better than even the best drivers can obtain.

Manual pumping affects the brakes at all four wheels, which decreases stopping power. With ABS, only the wheel close to locking up is pumped. Maximum braking force is applied to the other wheels, allowing a minimal stopping distance, according to AIC.

Safety-conscious consumers should take a hard look at ABS when purchasing their next cars. Four-wheel ABS is currently available in only the more expensive luxury and sports cars, rear-wheel ABS is available on some full-size pickup trucks.

The Automotive Information Council says a less expensive mechanical ABS is being tested in Europe and will probably be available in the U.S. in the next couple of years, making ABS practical for all types of cars.

AIC says anti-lock brakes are the most important advance in braking technology since disc brakes. ■

Auto industry crucial to the local economy

Just how important is the automotive industry to the economy of the United States? The Southfield-based Automotive Information Council Reference Center has some statistics worth considering.

Excluding agricultural work, one out of every seven jobs in the United States is directly related to the manufacture and use of motor vehicles. Those jobs put bread on the table for 12 million American families. Motor vehicle manufacturers have 346 facilities in 36 states and employ 750 thousand people. Nearly 2,900 original equipment and after-market parts manufacturers provide jobs to another half-million in 46 states.

The motor vehicle-based transportation industry employs the most people of any single industry, 7.5 million, with a payroll of $129 billion per year. Parts wholesalers and retailers, automotive-related services, roadway construction and maintenance, petroleum refiners and wholesalers provide the remaining three and a quarter million jobs which directly depend on motor vehicles.

According to AIC, the influence of the automotive industry doesn't end with those 12-million jobs. The motor vehicle industry is a major consumer of the products of other industries as well. More than 50 percent of the rubber and lead, one-fourth of the zinc and 17 percent of the steel and aluminum consumed in the United States are used by the motor vehicle industry.

The auto industry also plays a vital role in many developing industries. Most of the output of robotics manufacturers has been employed to automate motor vehicle and parts factories. High-tech electronics are not only used in the factories, but have found their way into the vehicles themselves. Computers may control everything from engine systems to brakes and suspensions. They are nearly as important to automobiles today as the engine. The move to high-tech components has nearly doubled the industries use of highly conductive platinum since 1981 - to over 1 million troy ounces, or 46 percent percent of the total U.S. consumption.

To many Americans, the automotive industry in the U.S. may be known as General Motors, Ford and Chrysler. The "Big Three" are just the best-known part of an industry that brings in $1 trillion in receipts and pays out more than $200 billion in payroll each year. ■

Fuel injectors perform best when well cleaned

Auto experts are warning motorists about the penalties of using sub-standard fuel and fuel lines in their fuel-injected vehicles.

The reason is the need for keeping the injector nozzles free of accumulations of contaminants. The tiny orifice which sprays gasoline into the port of a fuel injected engine may be about the size of a human hair. Deposits from the gasoline can accumulate at this critical point, eventually restricting the flow of the fuel.

The result - poor performance and, in advanced cases, starting trouble.

Major brands

Most major brands of gasoline feature detergent additives to minimize or prevent this condition. Sub-standard brands may not, however and, if used regularly, could cause injector trouble.

The fuel filter plays an especially important role on fuel injected cars, according to Car Care Council. While filtration is not substitute for detergent action, it does trap most of the dirt and contaminants that come from the gas tank. Consult your vehicle owner's manual for fuel filter replacement recommendations.

Fuel injector cleaner, a chemical product generally sold in 8 ounce containers for pouring into the gas tank, is a popular item found on auto supply shelves. Used periodically, this powerful detergent can help clean restricted injectors.

When the clogging of these fine orifices has gone past the point of chemical cure, sometimes because of intense engine heat baking the deposits onto the injector opening, the owner may have to seek professional help.

Fuel line hose

Another consideration with fuel injected vehicles is the fuel line hose. As opposed to conventional carbureted fuel systems, where fuel is delivered at a pressure of 8-10 p.s.i. (pounds per square inch), fuel pressure runs up to 60 p.s.i. Substandard fuel hose may not be able to accommodate that pressure, especially on older vehicles where partially restricted injector orifices have created back-pressure. Under such circumstances fuel line pressures can reach 175 p.s.i.

Fuel injected vehicles operate at higher under-hood temperatures, adding another form of stress to the fuel line.

The result of inferior fuel hose or improper connections could be a fire caused by gasoline spewing from a ruptured gas line onto a hot engine. ■
